Mr. Teagle's Big News. Warnings Against Reds. Gloom in Religion. Doyle Came Back.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE LABORATORIES of great industrial corporations are more valuable than all our gold and silver supply. Mr. Walter Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, announces a new process for making gasoline that will yield two barrels of gasoline where only one could be extracted before.

This news is vitally important to the world's oil supply, as it will provide the gigantic quantities of gasoline needed without criminal waste of the oil.

STANDARD OIL will not keep to itself the new process which it owns jointly with the "I. G. Farbenindustrie," of Germany.

Seventeen oil companies, including five Standard Oil companies, representing 80 per cent of all the gasoline production in the United States, will share the process.

You note that the Dutch-British "Shell" Company is not included in the list. Sir Henri Deterding, who does not lack energy, will try to do something about that.

MR. ELIHU ROOT, very able man, advocates a special national police to keep track of "Reds," Communists, that by secret means, according to Mr. Root, "aim at the destruction of our government."

The government should keep itself informed concerning the activities of all secret societies, no matter what their character. The less secrecy in a republic, the better.

AND, while a special national police force might discourage activities of "Reds," prosperity would discourage them still more.

What quinine is to malaria, prosperity is to Communism. When men have something to divide, they lose their interest in dividing.

AN ASSOCIATED PRESS dispatch from Vatican City, reporting the Pope's conversation with Msgr. Ryan, of the Catholic University of America, at Washington, says the Pope warned the people of America against Bolshevism. The Pope is quoted as saying:

"The people of the United States do not realize how far Bolshevism has spread."

THE POPE added that on a visit to Britain before his selection as pontiff he had been startled to find how great a hold Bolshevism had there, and warned America:

"Beware lest anything similar happen to your own country."

SOME PREACHERS in New York take a gloomy view of religion.

The Rev. H. Robert Smith told his congregation in Trinity Episcopal Church, at the head of Wall street, that religious faith is dollarized. He was in the right place to learn about that.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloan Coffin, head of Union Theological Seminary, says our Christian faith is "not so much disbelieved as ignored."

The Right Rev. Charles Edward Woodcock, bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Kentucky, says the church is devitalized, and the Rev. R. P. Barnes, quoting Whitehead, says the church has become "the harmless adornment of a comfortable life, and fears to discuss unpopular subjects."

The British Rev. Dr. William C. Poole, all the way from Christ Church, London, says Americans are in grave danger of becoming "morally color-blind."

THE INHABITANTS of the village of Coatepec hardly know what to think. Their crops had been almost ruined by too much rain. On Sunday, all the inhabitants gathered in the public square, to pray that no more rain might come. While they were praying, a cloudburst flooded the village, killed livestock, destroyed what was left of crops and many homes. The villagers fled to the mountains, the pious believing that the person praying must have omitted the word "not."

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE kept his word, and unbelievers are silenced. Eight thousand gathered in the great Albert Hall in London, an empty chair stood between the eldest son, Dennis. Sir Arthur, "wearing evening dress," came in and sat down in the chair. Mrs. Estelle Roberts, professional, hired medium, was the only one that saw him. She got his message and whispered it to Lady Doyle, who said it was authentic, nobody could have made it up.

SEVERAL OTHER spirits appeared, doubtless taking advantage of such a fine gathering. The amazing thing is that when a spirit takes all the trouble to come back in a dress suit he says so little. Doyle said:

"I am happy."

And sent word to his widow that some member of the family had visited his grave that morning. It was true.

IN PARIS yesterday the Japanese Imperial Price Takamatsu watched the annual military review of July 14.

The French young people danced at night, on the public squares, as usual, celebrating the glorious day when Paris decided to get rid of kings and pulled down the prison of the Bastile as a start.

THE YOUNG JAPANESE prince, well educated and familiar with history, may have

PLANE FOUND WRECKED IN MOUNTAIN SMASHUP

Goldsborough Hurried to Hospital, Skull Fractured; Stepmother at Bedside

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 15.—(A.P.)—Eighteen hours after his plane had crashed into a mountain side in a dense fog, Frank Goldsborough, 19, junior transcontinental record holder, was found alive in the wreckage early today.

Badly injured and unconscious, Goldsborough was in a critical condition, said Dr. John Trotter at Putnam Memorial Hospital, shortly after the aviator had been brought to the institution today. Goldsborough has a fracture of the skull.

TEETH KNOCKED OUT

The six men in the party that found the flier used a couple of suit coats tied together as a stretcher. They carried their unconscious burden nearly two miles before reaching the ambulance that took him to the hospital.

Part of the journey was through thick mud, knee deep, while at other points rocks and bowlders barred the path.

As the youthful airman was borne from his plane, his eyes were closed. His teeth had been knocked out by the force of the crash and true to the instinct of an experienced flier, he had reached for his parachute cord. One finger encircled in a tight grip the ring which releases the chute.

ALL-NIGHT SEARCH

Leonard Lawrence, a stage driver, discovered the wreckage after parties numbering more than 100 had searched all last night since Donald Mockler, Goldsborough's flight companion, had come out of the woods with word of the accident.

The two were flying from Buffalo, N. Y., to Keene, N. H., and

TROLLEY TRIES 2-TRACK STUNT

A dozen passengers on an inbound trolley car were shaken up when the front trucks of the trolley moved conventionally down Sixth avenue and the rear trucks jerked into Grant street during the noon hour today.

Hundreds of workers, bound for lunch, enjoyed the spectacle of a street car divided against itself.

Traffic was jammed until the rear trucks were pulled back into place. A split switch was blamed.

Massachusetts Cradle Of Liberty—Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 15.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

In Massachusetts we are celebrating the three hundredth anniversary of the granting of the first charter to the Old Bay Colony. That event had not only national but world significance. It was one of the early and potential beginnings of constitutional government. It started a new train of thought and action which has changed the whole foundation of human relationship. An era that was begun by an English document transplanted to this commonwealth and developed by people who came from the ends of the earth to share in its responsibilities and its benefits will be commemorated by the presence of representatives of many states and nations all bearing testimony to their allegiance to the principle of liberty under the law, local self government, and civil and religious freedom which Massachusetts has established and disseminated with so much power and success. To enumerate the inestimable blessings that it has conferred, the great names that it has produced, the glories that it has encompassed, would be to restate the records of modern civilization. Never before were the rights of man advanced so far in three centuries. It is a heritage that lays on all humanity the gravest responsibilities but endows them with the largest promise of future progress.

REED DEFENDS NAVAL TREATY IN SENATE

Pennsylvanian Warns Against Shipbuilding Race; Hoover Submits to Secrecy Ban

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(A.P.)—The text of the first American proposal made at the London naval conference was given to the Senate today by Senator Reed during a bristling exchange with Senator Johnson.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 15. The defense in the London naval treaty fight fired its second major gun today when Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, one of the American delegates, presented an elaborate analysis of the pact and urged its ratification.

Senator Robinson (Dem.), of Arkansas, the other senatorial delegate, spoke in similar vein.

The treaty, Reed asserted, is of tremendous benefit to the civilized nations of the world because it removes international naval rivalry, slashes armament costs and promotes peace.

Reed declared the United States entered the London conference with an "amazing inferiority" in auxiliary warships and emerged with a navy "on exact parity" with Great Britain. He asserted the Japanese had gone into the conference with a superiority over the United States in auxiliary ships "only to have the treaty restore superiority to America."

SEES NAVAL RACE AHEAD

The Pennsylvanian discussed every detail of the treaty and pleaded for its ratification as a gesture toward world peace. Its rejection, he warned, would lead immediately to a naval race between the three great sea powers that would end only in war.

With President Hoover assenting, administration leaders have agreed to accept a modified "anti-secret agreement" reservation in the hope of accelerating Senate ratification.

The reservation, sponsored and modified by Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, would base American ratification upon the express condition that no agreement, secret or otherwise, express

ADMITS HE SET FATAL FIRE IN COVERDALE

German Officials Inform U. S. Prisoner Confessed; County Checks 2 Deaths

District Attorney Andrew T. Park was informed by the State Department at Washington today that a prisoner held in Germany has confessed he set fire to a building in Coverdale, Bethel Township, resulting in the death of two persons.

Assigned by Park to investigate the case, county detectives learned from records at the coroner's office that Mrs. Catherine Nestor, 36, and her daughter, Anna, 9, lost their lives in a fire that destroyed a store building at Coverdale, March 27, 1927.

CHECKING FATAL FIRE

It is believed that the confession of the prisoner, who gave his name to Hamburg (Germany) authorities as Anthony Brevurly, refers to those deaths.

Park ordered detectives to run down every clue in the case, and has informed the state department that action to extradite Brevurly will depend upon evidence uncovered.

County Detective David Carlin was sent to Coverdale today to learn if Brevurly ever had resided there.

DIFFICULT CHARGE

As the coroner's records show no evidence of arson uncovered in the inquest into the deaths of Mrs. Nestor and her daughter, District Attorney Park declared that a very thorough investigation of the case would have to be made because arson is a difficult charge to prove.

Park declared that it would be impossible to convict Brevurly on his own confession unless it was well substantiated by other witnesses.

YOUTH GETS $325 RING DOWNTOWN

Pricing Gems in Penn Ave. Store, Boy Snatches One And Darts Into Crowd

A boy aged about 18, coatless and hatless and dressed in a yellow polo shirt and soiled trousers, walked into the Helfer jewelry store at 617 Penn avenue today and asked the clerk, J. F. Doherty, to show him some diamonds.

When Doherty showed him a ring priced at $100, the ostensible customer said he'd prefer something better.

Doherty produced one priced at $325. That was too high.

SNATCHES STONE

The clerk brought out a third stone, valued at $185, and the visitor announced he had changed his mind and didn't want a diamond.

But he picked up the $325 ring while Doherty was replacing the others, and hurried from the store.

ESCAPED

Doherty implored pedestrians as he chased the fleet-footed customer along Penn avenue.

"Stop that thief!"

Nobody stopped him, and he disappeared in an alley between Sixth and Seventh streets.

Armstrong, Babcock Vote New Auto for McGovern

A forecast of the millenium arrived today in the City-County Building.

County Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and E. V. Babcock voted to present their rebellious colleague, C. C. McGovern, with a new car!

That would certainly signify the millenium.

But McGovern, far from pleased, insisted he was being made to appear ridiculous.

McGovern has been driving a 1925 car, worn down by 145,000 miles, or thereabouts. The other day he stripped the gears and sent it to the county garage.

Today Howard Allen, superintendent of the garage, reported that it would cost $900 to repair the McGovern vehicle, adding:

"And it isn't worth it."

McGovern retorted:

"Allen's ridiculing me. That car always took me where I wanted to go."

Armstrong:

"Well, that car doesn't look so good."

Babcock:

"Commissioner, how'd you like a new Buick? I'm not saying anything against any other car, but . . ."

Babcock made the motion.

Armstrong added the second.

McGovern didn't vote.

A few minutes later McGovern made the motion which authorized a $2,800 auto for District Attorney Park, who appeared to testify that he was the only county official without a horseless carriage.

DEFENSE SCORES POINT IN STEEL MERGER TRIAL

PERMITTED TO GRILL PURNELL

Sheet and Tube President, Called to Identify Papers, May Be on Stand All Day

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 15.—(AP.)—The defense in the suit to enjoin the merger of the Youngstown Sheet and ...pany with the Beth... Corporation was giv... ...expected inning today when attorneys for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests the plaintiffs surprised their opponents by calling Frank Purnell president of the Youngstown Company to the stand as a "hostile" witness, ahead of President Eugene Grace, of Bethlehem.

It developed that they intended to have Purnell merely identify papers, then leave the stand until another day.

EXTENDS QUESTIONING

But when the plaintiff's attorneys turned the witness over to former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, chief of defense counsel, the latter began to question him about other matters.

The plaintiffs objected, on the ground court rules forbid questioning beyond their own examination.

Judge David G. Jenkins held that while the plaintiffs were technically correct he was willing for Purnell to remain on the stand as a defense witness. Defense attorneys then indicated they might continue to examine Purnell throughout the day.

The bulk of Purnell's testimony was in defense of the manner in which the officers of the two steel concerns arrived at the one and one-third shares eBthlehem to one share Youngstown basis for exchange of stock. The Eaton interests have charged the basis was unfair to the Youngstown stockholders.

GRACE SALARY AT ISSUE

Grace, who was scheduled to testify today, is said by the anti-merger forces to have received $1,600,000 annually from Bethlehem. The opposition group has charged that huge salaries paid Bethlehem officials were concealed from Sheet and Tube shareholders when they were asked to ratify the merger.

ERIE BUS FARE 15 CENTS TOP

Bus passengers in Erie are charged only 10 and 15 cents, Albert F. Tideswell, general manager of the Erie Railways Company, testified today before the Public Service Commission.

The railways company is asking permission to abandon a branch line three-and-a-quarter miles long, extending from Twenty-sixth street, Erie, to Westminster, a suburb. The Erie Coach Company, a subsidiary, seeks a certificate of public convenience to convey passengers along the same route.

Tideswell testified that within the City of Erie the fare would be 10 cents, and 15 cents to points outside the limits.

The coach company operates a total of 23 buses, carrying passengers six miles for the maximum of 15 cents, he said.

The trolley branch line had never paid since it began operating seven years ago, Tideswell said. No objection was made to the proposal.

or implied, exists between any of the contracting parties, regarding operation of the treaty.

Norris made one exception—the notes exchanged between England, Japan and the United States, construing article 19 of the treaty.

PLEDGE OF NATIONS

These notes, initiated by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, pledged the three nations to confine all replacements, allowed by the treaty, to the exact type of naval armament scrapped. Before the notes were exchanged, some naval authorities feared the replacement clause might allow a nation to replace eight-inch guns in lieu of dismantled six-inch guns, or use one type vessel as a replacement for a ship of a different type.

In their notes, all three nations agreed the replacements would have to be in the same category as the armament scrapped.

The administration's willingness to accept the reservation came as a surprise, since reports declared President Hoover was opposed to it. Some administration leaders also protested that the "condition" was an implied rebuke to the President, since the executive, in refusing to turn over secret memoranda to the Senate, had declared no secret agreements existed between the United States and any other contracting power.

The reservation, they argued, carried the faint imputation that the Senate didn't believe the President.

MAY SHORTEN DEBATE

Acceptance of the reservation may allay some debate and help the administration in its fight against time. Sponsors of the reservation will have no excuse for debating it, since the administration will accept it, and so must confine their debate to the treaty itself.

There appeared little likelihood of a vote this week, since opposition leaders indicated there would be a dozen prepared speeches against the treaty.

With ratification delayed, at least, until next week, the administration will have an even more difficult task to maintain the quorum, necessary for the transaction of business. Senator Watson (Rep.), of Indiana, administration floor leader, however, announced he had personal assurances from sufficient Senators to insure a quorum for two more weeks.

Woman Can't Care For Dogs, Dooms Them to Die

BROOMALL, Pa., July 15.—(AP.)—Lombo and Fluffy—jet black Belgian shepherd dogs—were put to death because their mistress, Mrs. Ada Hanley, 56, found that she no longer could care for them. They had been in her possession and care for nine years.

The task was assigned to Dr. James C. Horner, veterinarian, who was instructed to use the most humane means possible in disposing of the pets. Two graves were made ready in the yard of the Hanley home, both of the graves will bear markers.

Many persons had offered to give the dogs a home, but Mrs. Hanley in refusing to let her pets go elsewhere said she would be unhappy and despondent if they were alive and not in her custody.

FRANK GOLDSBOROUGH

had stopped at Schenectady, N. Y.

Taking off from there, they encountered intense fog within 15 minutes, and became lost, crashing about noon.

Mockler was thrown free but was unable to pull the wreckage off his companion's body. After an hour he started down the mountain side. He arrived at a farm house at 5 p. m. Searching parties were immediately formed and airplanes were notified to fly over the country in an effort to locate the wrecked plane.

ON MOUNTAIN ALL NIGHT

The crash occurred in Woodford Mountain.

Mockler, although nearly exhausted, returned with a searching party and stayed on the mountain all night. He remembered a swamp and a waterfall near the scene of the crash and the information led woodsmen to the scene.

Mrs. Bryce Goldsborough, the boy's stepmother, arrived here late last night from Albany and hurried to the hospital awaiting his arrival.

Mockler was flying with Goldsborough to Keene to keep a lecture appointment last night. Goldsborough had left Cleveland, O., yesterday morning.

FATHER LOST AT SEA

Goldsborough was a son of the late Bruce Goldsborough, aviator, who lost his life when the plane Dawn, of Miss Frances Grayson, disappeared while it attempted to span the Atlantic from Newfoundland in 1927.

Young Goldsborough was undaunted by his father's fate and took an intense interest in flying. He became a licensed pilot in November of last year and in April started his record-breaking flight from New York to Los Angeles. He made the trip in eight days almost 14 hours less than the time required by Richard James, the former junior titleholder. He also completed the return trip from the coast in record time.

Italy's Speed Plane Entry Turned Down

LONDON, July 15.—(INS.)—The Royal Aero Club today returned Italy's entry for next year's Schneider cup race, the only application received so far.

The entry was returned because the newest rule was not conformed to. The aviation body at a general conference last January altered entry conditions by raising the deposit for every machine entered from $200 to $8,000. Italy challenged the ruling.

M'CORMICK AIDE BARES OUTLAY OF $7,207

His Own Money, Nye Quiz Witness Declares; Illinois Total Brought to $327,000

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP.)—W. D. Alexander, lumberman of Bloomington, testified today at the senatorial inquiry into Ruth Hanna McCormick's primary campaign expenses that he spent $7,207 of his own funds in behalf of her campaign.

He said he assumed direction of Mrs. McCormick's campaign in McLean County because of his friendship for her and not because of any request from her headquarters. He had informally told Mrs. McCormick of his activities and his expenditures without submitting any report, he declared.

TOTAL NOW $327,000

In her testimony Mrs. McCormick had named McLean County as one of several in which her campaign had not cost anything. The expenditures disclosed by the lumber man swelled the total in her behalf to about $327,000, of which she put up $252,000.

Alexander testified he had volunteered his services and his funds, saying his activities benefited him in his community. Alexander said he might aspire to public office, but he had no other interests aside from his lumber business. He did own some utility stocks.

Mrs. McCormick appeared in the committee room while Alexander was on the stand, but did not exercise the privilege granted her to cross-examine witnesses.

HELPED VOLUNTARILY

W. R. James, president of the Chicago West Parks system, who directed Mrs. McCormick's campaign in Chicago and Cook County, said he volunteered to assist her and received no compensation.

He denied he had solicited or received any contributions to her campaign. He had not placed on the payrolls of the West Park system any persons who worked in Mrs. McCormick's behalf, he asserted.

Twenty witnesses were to appear today before the committee.

Chairman Gerald P. Nye, United States senator from North Dakota, is awaiting the arrival of Senators C. C. Dill, of Washington and Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, to help with the hearing.

Frederick A. Smith, veteran newspaperman who has been in Mrs. McCormick's employ for two years as publicity man and research director, said he left the services of Senator Charles S. Deneen and Roy O. West, Republican national committeeman, to join Mrs. McCormick's staff after the 1928 primary.

URGES BROAD INQUIRY

When Senator Nye concluded his questioning, Smith, in a statement to the committee, called Nye's attention to various newspaper articles which had linked Mrs. McCormick's name with the "Chicago underworld," as a result of the senatorial inquiry. He said he felt the committee should go into these matters and give Mrs. McCormick a "clean bill of health."

The next witness, James W. Snyder, political secretary of Mrs. McCormick, was questioned regarding the method of perfecting her organization downstate. He described the conditions which had confronted her in various districts where he said Senator Deneen controlled the patronage of prohibition agents. Postal employes and similar Federal workers, and said it was often difficult to find persons willing to take over the county and city manager positions for Mrs. McCormick.

HOOVER HEARS FARM PLIGHT

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(INS.)—President Hoover was given a first-hand report today on the depressing situation in the grain belt occasioned by the tobogganing of wheat prices.

Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, who has been touring the West with Chairman Alexander Legge, of the Farm Board, seeking to "sell" the producers the policy of reducing acreage, returned to the capital and reported to today's cabinet meeting his beliefs that there is little that can be done at this time to bolster the market.

Hyde said he considered it useless for the Farm Board to buy 100,000,000 bushels of wheat at this time, as proposed by Senators Capper and Allen of Kansas.

It is understood the Secretary warned Hoover that unless there is a marked recovery meanwhile the administration is going to be faced in the next Congress with a renewed demand for the equalization fee or the debenture plan.

St. Swithin's Day Finds Fair Skies O'er City

St. Swithin's day today brought no hint here of a 40 days' rain to relieve the long drought.

There will be many to watch daily weather signs in an effort to prove the superstition well-founded.

Pittsburgh today enjoyed a temperature of 81 degrees and fair skies.

By the token of an old rhyme, the same brand of weather will continue, for the verse runs:

"St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain,
For 40 days it will remain;
St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair,
For 40 days 'twill rain nae mair."

JEAN ACKER

ACTRESS' SUIT ASKS $25,600

NEW YORK, July 15.—(INS.)—Jean Acker, former film actress and the first wife of Rudolph Valentino, charges William R. Delehanty, New York millionaire, with failure to live up to his contract to pay her $19,400 a year for the rest of her natural life, in a suit on file here today. It was met with absolute silence by Delehanty's attorney, Edward J. Maher, Jr.

"I refuse to be quoted," was Maher's answer to all questions about the mysterious contract by which Delehanty already has paid Miss Acker $65,000, according to the former actress.

Delehanty himself, real estate operator and prominent Tammany Hall politician, was out of town, said his secretary.

Miss Arker sets forth that she was under a movie contract paying $125 a week when four years ago Delehanty agreed to pay her $700 a month and give her $10,000 a year bonus besides. She collected regularly, to the amount of $65,000, until June, 1926, when the bonuses stopped, she said. Then last October she said the monthly $700 ceased also. Delehanty blamed Wall Street, according to Jean. But Jean insists she is entitled to every cent of the $25,600 she claims Delehanty now owes her in payments past due.

done some serious thinking, watching the world's most logical people, most thrifty and prosperous, celebrating an event that led to the beheading of King Louis the Sixteenth.

A BUDAPEST newspaper prints a dispatch from Bologna, saying that Mussolini is recovering satisfactorily from an operation for cancer of the stomach. The surgeon chosen to perform the operation is said to be Dr. Nigroselly, an anti-Fascist.

Thus the great powers of the church in ancient days usually had Jewish physicians to take care of them, disliking their religious beliefs, but preferring their science to the ignorance and quackery of good Christians.

IF MUSSOLINI really has cancer, which may reasonably be doubted, that cancer may have for European civilization, most serious consequences.

HOW RAPIDLY money grows when well managed. The wife of the late Henry M. Flagler became insane. He divorced her, put her in a sanitarium and put $2,000,000 aside for her use. The unfortunate woman is now dead, after 30 years in the sanitarium, and her $2,000,000 has increased to $15,000,000, which she leaves. Mr. Flagler was an oil man and trustees of his wife's $2,000,000 invested the money in Standard Oil stocks. That helps to explain the increase.

CAPONE FREED OF PERJURY CHARGES

Case Dropped After Gang Chieftain Wins in One Trial in Florida Court

MIAMI, Fla., July 15.—(AP.)—County Solicitor George McCaskill announced today that two perjury charges against "Scarface" Al Capone, Chicago gang leader, would be dropped "because they cannot be successfully prosecuted."

Capone was acquitted by a directed verdict in the first of three perjury charges which grew out of his arrest here several weeks ago.

The quashing of the two remaining perjury cases brings to an end, for the present at least, the official campaign inaugurated by Dade County and the City of Miami to drive the gangster from residence in his $250,000 home on Palm Island at Miami Beach. Capone has been involved in some phase of the "ousting" litigation since he arrived here April 20 for what he announced at that time was a two weeks' vacation.

He recently declared he had wearied of the assaults upon his freedom by officialdom of this vicinity, and would return to Chicago as soon as the perjury cases were disposed of.

The statement later was amended to indicate that he did not plan to let the happenings of the last three months influence his desire to maintain a part-time home here. One of his attorneys, J. F. Gordon, quoted Capone as saying he would not be run out of Miami.

Meanwhile there was no comment, either of confirmation or denial regarding the proposed Capone estate near Boca Raton, in Broward County, not far from the exclusive millionaire colony at Palm Beach. At Lake Worth last night, W. G. Stovall, contractor, announced his firm had been given a contract for part of the work on a $375,000 estate there for Capone.

COUNTY KEEPS TAB ON SPROUL

If Evangelist John W. Sproul, at liberty on $5,000 bond, is leaving the city, Chief George W. Murren, of the county detectives, wants to know where he's going.

Murren announced today that he had ordered a sleuth to bring in the Glory Barn evangelist to explain announcements that he was setting out on a tour of other states, outside the district attorney's jurisdiction.

The evangelist's wife told the detective that Sproul, out of town today, was expected back tomorrow.

Sproul was convicted of giving a $3,000 worthless check to F. J. Vogel, crippled railroader, of Millvale, who told of loaning Sproul $5,000 for an evangelistic campaign.

2 NOMINATED BY WALTHERS

CLEVELAND, July 15.—(AP.)—E. J. Gallmeyer, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was expected to be re-elected president of the International Walther League, young Lutherans' organization, at today's session of the thirty-eighth annual convention.

Only one other name, that of E. W. Schroeter, of Cleveland, was presented by the nominating committee. Gallmeyer, in his president's address yesterday, denounced "constitutional tampering," although he avoided direct reference to the Eighteenth Amendment.

Blue Law

What Outstanding People Think Of It

(Each day for awhile the Sun-Telegraph will ask opinions of leading citizens on the state's antique Blue Law. The second group is presented below.)

JOHN S. HERRON, President of City Council—The temper of the people of Pittsburgh is unquestionably for modification of the Blue Law. The poll of the Sun - Telegraph has been an effective and reliable means of taking the public pulse. I believe it is time to end this impossible situation and amend a law which is unenforceable and ignored and which tends to bring disrespect upon all laws. The law should reflect the existing state of mind, not that of 136 years ago. The question is the extent of revision. Council has gone on record for modification and will present the demand of Pittsburgh to the Legislature. The special Council committee will determine, by hearings and otherwise, what the people desire.

John Herron.

JUDGE FRANK P. PATTERSON, of the Court of Common Pleas—The Blue Law should be modified. I do not think that Sunday should be a day of license but the law regulating its observance should be liberalized to conform to modern thought and conditions.

Judge Patterson.

JOSEPH G. ARMSTRONG, Chairman Board of Commissioners of Allegheny County—The sensible thing to do is the right thing to do. Amend the Blue Law. The Constitution of our country was written by men of great ability and vision. They looked far into the future and planned well for later generations. Yet this noble document has had 19 amendments. Our forefathers could not vision the vast changes of today. The Blue Law was suitable to its times. The only thing to do on Sunday then was to worship. There were no works of necessity then as today to keep the intricate wheels of modern civilization from running down. The law should be shaped to meet these modern conditions and necessities and the modern demand for recreation for the health and pleasure of the masses of people.

J. G. Armstrong

CHARLES J. McBRIDE, member County Board for Assessment and Revision of Taxes and former member of Legislature—The most important essential for a change in the Blue Law is to impress upon the members of the Legislature the demand of their constituents for action. Legislators have been prone to leave things as they are unless influenced by a pressing public sentiment. They consider that inaction on this subject is the safest course to follow. The articulate minority which threatens legislators if they attempt to amend the Blue Law will trade votes between city and rural members and use every effort to keep the ancient law intact. When I sponsored an amendment to the Blue Law nearly 10 years ago it was defeated on the floor of the House largely by the votes of members fond of attending Sunday baseball games the bill sought to legalize.

C. J. McBride.

Jenny Dolly, Dancer, Wins Millions at Baccarat

PARIS, July 15.—(INS.)—Playing boldly on a run of tremendous luck, Jenny Dolly, the golden-heeled dancer today raked from nine to 12 million francs from the baccarat tables of the gambling casino at Le Touquet and repeatedly nearly realized the gambler's dream of "breaking the bank."

An awed and somewhat envious audience watched with breathless tensity the spectacular gambling, with the dancer staking a million francs on each play. At times, as the play progressed, only the sharp breath of the croupiers was heard as another million francs dropped into Miss Dolly's lap, with bejeweled women and monocled men silently eying the increasing fortunes piling up before the lucky winner.

Frequently, the house management nervously dispatched a detail of men to its own bank for more funds. Jenny Dolly's luck remained unbroken to the last minute. She was escorted to her apartment in triumph.

Miss Dolly had been losing steadily the last few evenings, although her previous run of luck had provided her with a tremendous sum of winnings. Her net profit today was reckoned as one of the largest in recent gambling history of the casino.

High Bread Price Raked By Farm Board Member

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(Universal)—The price of bread is too high, in the opinion of Commissioner Samuel R. McKelvie, of the Federal Farm Board.

McKelvie's statememnt was in line with the board's new policy of informing the public when it believes retail prices of farm products or commodities made from farm products are out of proportion to the prices received by the farmer.

A recent statement by McKelvie that it makes no difference in the retail price of bread whether the farmer receives $1 or $1.50 per bushel for his wheat was branded by Robert E. Sterling, editor of a milling paper at Kansas City, as "ridiculously and palpably untrue."

In a letter to Sterling, McKelvie pointed out that bread continues at the higher prices long after the price of wheat has declined. McKelvie added:

"The miller hedges his purchases of wheat and bases his flour sales thereon. In turn, the baker may hedge his purchase of flour. If the much vaunted hedging market is what it is reputed to be, the hazards for price fluctuation for wheat and flour are removed and the consumer of bread should not be obliged to wait a year for his share in lower prices."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—(INS.)—John MacDonald, confessed perjurer, whose testimony during the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing outrage trials here 14 years ago, helped to send Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings to prison for life, will be returned to California from Baltimore, where he was found recently, at the expense of California, if MacDonald agrees to certain conditions.

Gov. C. C. Young today was on record with that declaration. He said the state would provide transportation if MacDonald would agree to appear before open hearings of the State Advisory Pardon Board and the California State Supreme Court.

Word from Baltimore that MacDonald's attorney had agreed to Young's terms was received with satisfaction by the Tom Mooney Defense League. Although it was expected MacDonald would start for California at once, the Governor has set no time or place for the hearings.

FLOODS BLOCK FLIER SEARCH

RANGOON, Burma, July 15.—(INS.)—Floods and a tiger-infested jungle blocked the search today for Eric L. Hook, British airman who crashed in an attempted flight from England to Australia. Natives who went out from the Prome region, 170 miles north of here, returned to camp after encountering high waters in various parts of the jungle.

In the Prome hospital, suffering from exposure, leech bites and jungle fever, lies James Matthews, companion of Hook on the ill-fated flight, who forged his way through the dense jungle after the crash in an effort to secure help for his dying aviator friend. Matthews was picked up, exhausted, by natives.

Matthews told authorities he left Hook lying in the shade of a tree, with enough provisions at his side for some days. The crash occurred while they were crossing the Arakan range, he said.

Revelations of the extent of the plot followed the arrest of Richard J. Petersen, 35, and Angelo Lavorie, 29. Petersen was one of the most active agents of the company and Lavorie was a clerk. Both pleaded not guilty to falsification of records.

BETTING AT DOG RACES ENDS

people were watching the fleet greyhounds, Murren told Scanlon he'd have to stop the gambling.

"I told him," Murren repeated, and he answered: "We'll quit."

WATCH THRONG BET

Murren and County Detectives James McGinley, John Carmichael and Leo Dunn remained while the gay throngs bet. Unless a technical or legal obstacle arises they were seeing the dogs run there for the last time.

Scanlon sent word with attaches that "he hadn't any statement to make."

Previously Detective Carmichael questioned as to whether he was going to order the racing officials to stop explained that he had not been given any such orders.

"I don't know anything about it," he said.

OFFICIALS RETICENT

Meanwhile the betting, which is similar to the pari-mutuel and called the "contribution and refund system," will be off tonight, unless District Attorney Park relents or a court order is procured preventing the closing of the tracks.

That the latter plan was being considered would not be admitted by officials. It was said they did not know what they were going to do.

It was considered unlikely that the tracks would continue open without the betting system, although officially a 50-cent admission rate is charged at the entrance. Due to the issuance of many passes, it was said to be impossible to conduct the races without percentage of the betting. The tracks represent an investment of more than $50,000, with upkeep coming out of the 10 per cent cut taken from the "contribution and refund" system.

Officials of the track considered the system outside the gambling laws, alleging that all but the 10 per cent cut for expenses and profit was refunded to a portion of those who contributed—those holding tickets on the winning dogs.

The district attorney's command followed a complaint registered by the Council of the Borough of Blawnox, near the scene of the races, and from the Allegheny Valley Ministerial Association. One complaint was in the form of a protesting resolution passed by the councilmanic body. Previously Park had issued a statement declaring the dog races would be unmolested by his office unless he received specific and responsible complaints.

Likewise, Bridgeville and New Kensington dog tracks are closed. Bridgeville, too, had its final run last night, presenting a derby. Both these clubs have been operating for several months.

If racing is finally banned today, an exodus of hundreds of dogs will start from the city. More than 200 are at the Guyasuta track, with a similar number at Bridgeville.

ANTI-DRY SHIFT TO DEMOCRATS DELAYED

Statement Hints at Solid Support for Hemphill, Kistler, Niles Slate

PHILADELPHIA, July 15 —(AP.)— Announcement of the pre-empted Liberal party ticket for the general election in November was not made here yesterday by the executive committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, as had been expected.

At the close of a two-hour session of the committee, Robert K. Cassatt, who was chairman of the campaign committee of the Bohlen-Phillips-Lewis ticket in the recent primary, announced that no decision had been reached.

He said:

"I have no extended statement to make at this time. I may say, however, that our committee is unanimous in its views. Of course we will support only wet candidates."

AID FOR KISTLER

The last sentence of this statement was interpreted in some quarters to mean that the anti-drys would support not only John M. Hemphill, Democratic nominee for governor, but also Sedgwick Kistler and Judge Henry C. Niles, respectively, Democratic candidates for United States Senator and the State Supreme Court.

It had been reported that Hemphill would be the only Democrat indorsed by the Liberal party and that the Republican candidates for other offices, including Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, for United States Senator, would be accepted.

AVOID SPLIT TICKET

Those who argued for the indorsement of Kistler and Niles were said to have pointed out that if Hemphill were to run alone on the Liberal ticket voters wanting to cast their ballots against Gifford Pinchot, provided the Supreme Court overrules the contention of supporters of Francis Shunk Brown in the Luzerne County perforated ballot case and declares Pinchot, the Republican nominee, would be obliged to split their ticket all the way down the line.

Present at the meeting, in addition to members of the executive committee, were Henry H. Curran, New York national president of the association; Thomas W. Phillips, Jr., of Butler, Pa., defeated anti-dry gubernatorial candidate, and B. Dawson Coleman, of Lebanon, vice chairman of the Pennsylvania anti-dry group.

NOMINEES ON TOUR

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., July 15 —(AP.)—John M. Hemphill and Sedgwick Kistler, Democratic nominees for Governor and United States Senator, respectively, inaugurated a statewide get acquainted tour here yesterday.

The candidates, traveling together, confined themselves to hand-shaking and meeting Democratic party workers, keeping all speech making for later in the campaign. They stopped at five towns in Armstrong county and expected to extend their tour during the next several weeks to include nearly every county seat in Pennsylvania.

PINCHOT TALKS ON BASTILE DAY

PHILADELPHIA, July 15 —(AP.)— Thousands gathered at the Municipal Stadium to celebrate Bastile Day—the French Fourth of July—commemorating the fall of the Bastile. The date, July 14, 1789, marked the ascendancy of the democracy in France over the crown.

Among the speakers were M. Rene Weiller, French consul here; Gifford Pinchot, Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell and Msgr. L. Zouain, of the Syro Maronite Church.

In his address Pinchot declared the watchfulness of patriots was the "only defense against the continual encroachment of special privilege, whether that privilege wears the livery of a king or is exercised through the economic domination of monopoly, or takes the shape of the political tyranny of gang rule in cities."

The former Governor said every effort to exploit the people or control the will of the people against the public good was an attack on liberty.

TRUCK CONTROL IN U. S. URGED

Need of a federal body with jurisdiction over interstate motor freight commerce was emphasized by William F. Best, examiner of the Public Service Commission, today after a hearing on the application of the Interstate Motors Transportation Company of Erie.

The company asked for permission to operate in this state in its service which will extend from Buffalo, N. Y., through Erie to Cleveland, O. The application was opposed by the New York Central Railroad and the E. H. Scott Transportation Company of Erie on the ground that present facilities are adequate.

Many of the questions in cross-examination were objected to by counsel for the applicant who contended they involved questions of interstate commerce.

After the hearing Best said:

"This hearing shows the necessity of a federal commission to handle such cases in co-operation with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has no jurisdiction over interstate motor freight service. A measure having this object is pending in Congress."

SLAYER BLAMES STOCK LOSSES FOR HIS ACT

Killed Financier in Court While in Frenzy as Result Of Broodings, He Explains

LOS ANGELES, July 15 —(AP.)— A frenzy, caused by brooding over stock market losses, was offered today by Frank Keaton, 56, as an explanation for his slaying of Motley Flint, Los Angeles financier.

Rising from among the spectators as Flint stepped from the witness stand yesterday, Keaton fired three times at the retired banker over the shoulders of Mrs. David O. Selznick, wife of a motion picture executive. As Flint collapsed, Keaton threw his gun at the financier, raised his hands in surrender and cried:

"This fellow ruined me; he ruined me!"

BROTHER OF SENATOR

Flint, brother of former United States Senator Frank P. Flint, had been testifying in a $250,000 recovery suit brought by Mr. and Mrs. Selznick against a bank once headed by the financier. Flint had paused to address Mr. and Mrs. Selznick as the shots rang out.

Keaton, an Inglewood, Cal., real estate dealer, later re-enacted the shooting, saying he knew Flint by name but never had met the financier.

An inquest was ordered. Fifteen were summoned to describe the shooting. Superior Judge Frank Collier, first to serve the slayer, was asked to testify.

LOST HIS FORTUNE

In a rambling story, Keaton said he had left his home where his sickly wife at times takes in washing to help provide for the couple's two daughters. He carried a pistol he had kept in a trunk for 40 years. He had no interest in the trial at which Flint was a witness, he said, but was drawn to the courtroom by some inexplicable urge. He declared:

"I had nothing against Flint or the bankers associated with him. I don't know why I did it. I lost a lot of money, all my $36.00 life savings through investing in stocks they could have kept up."

REPEAL SOUGHT BY PROSECUTOR

NEW YORK, July 15 (Universal).—A repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment as a "relief to the law-abiding element of the country" is advocated in a statement issued by District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain last night.

Pointing out the responsibilities of his office, Crain declared:

"As one possessed of some information respecting the causes for crimes and the conditions conducive to the maintenance of law and order, it seems fitting that my attitude with respect to prohibition and the policy of this office be stated.

"Among the intrinsic objections are that it unwisely enlarges Federal powers and unwisely curtails the powers of the states; that it engrafts into the Constitution an incongruous provision and loses respect for that instrument.

"It is also unnecessarily drastic and extreme, and it unwisely substitutes for self-control and self-restraint statutory mandate in aid of proper conduct."

Declaring he believes these intrinsic objections cannot be overcome and that the evils caused by non-enforcement of prohibition are remediable only by repeal, Crain added:

"Because of these objections I urge the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment."

CONFEDERATES' CAMP SITE TO BE MARKED

Granite Memorial Near McConnellsburg to Be Unveiled on July 31

The site of the last Confederate campfire north of the Mason and Dixon line, where Gen. Bradley T. Johnson, Southern cavalry leader, paid a Fulton County farmer $600 for supper and breakfast for the general and his staff, is to be commemorated by the Pennsylvania Historical Commission, it was announced today by William H. Stevenson, president of the commission.

A memorial of granite and bronze is being erected on the state highway three miles south of McConnellsburg where Gen. Johnson and his gray troopers spent the night following the burning of Chambersburg in 1864. The unveiling will take place on the afternoon of July 31, the sixty-sixth anniversary of the Confederate withdrawal from Pennsylvania soil.

VETERANS TO ATTEND

Prominent state officials surviving veterans of the Union and Confederate armies and patriotic organizations will take part in the dedication. The monument was sponsored by the Fulton County Historical Society. Mrs. John P. Cowan, president of the Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will speak for Confederate organizations in the North.

W. C. Patterson, owner of the farm where the southerners made their camp, retains some of the Confederate money with which Gen. Johnson paid his $600 board bill.

Mr. Patterson, a small boy at the time, remembers the arrival of a Confederate courier who ordered his mother to prepare a meal for Gen. Johnson and a few officers of his staff. Spring chickens were killed, fresh vegetables were gathered from the garden and every effort was made to provide a good meal in the hope that by appeasing the appetites of the leaders, the Confederates would take less plunder from the farm.

GALLANT CAVALIER

Gen. Johnson, a Maryland lawyer before the war, proved to be a gallant cavalier, according to Mr. Patterson, and after eating his supper and commending his hostess for her culinary skill, he joined his troopers in a barnyard near by and slept under the open sky.

While at breakfast early on the following morning bugles echoed over the hills and down the road from McConnellsburg thundered the Union cavalry with the famous Fourteenth Pennsylvania, commanded by Col. J. M. Schoonmaker, in the advance. Gen. Johnson paid liberally from his roll of Confederate bills, leaped into the saddle and rode off with his men in the direction of Hancock, Md. Sharp fighting followed, but Johnson escaped.

Bishop Miguel Mora Dies of Paralysis

MEXICO CITY, July 15 —(AP.)— Bishop Miguel M. De La Mora, episcopal sub-secretary, died yesterday of paralysis. His rank was that of archbishop although hundreds of persons with whom he had come into contact during a three-year self-enforced exile knew him best as the Bishop of San Luis Potosi.

He was accused in 1917 of conspiracy against the government and was arrested. President Wilson appealed to President Carranza in his behalf and Pope Benedict asked for his release.

A third car hit the Badali car during the mixup.

Bakery Driver Held On Liquor Charge

SHARON, Pa., July 15 —William Shaffer, truck driver for a local bakery, was arrested near Greenville when county and state officers searched his truck and found a gallon of liquor with the baked goods. Arraigned before Justice W. D. Remor, of Greenville, he was bound over to court under $1,500 bail.

STIMSON SCANS RUSS INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(Universal)—Secretary of State Stimson has declined to state whether Treasury agents would be given diplomatic passports to proceed to Russia to investigate the source of recent exportations of Soviet lumber.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Lowman has announced that he would send agents to Russia to investigate the charges that recent lumber consignments were the product of convict labor. The shipments were ordered held up by the customs agents at Providence and Seattle until their origin could be proved.

The United States does not recognize Soviet Russia and has not maintained diplomatic relations with Moscow since the accession of the Soviet regime. Thus whether the Secretary of State would ask diplomatic status for the Treasury agents and whether the Moscow government would accord it involves a nice point of international etiquet, it was pointed out.

NEVER EXPECTED TO WORK AGAIN

Well As Ever—Owes It All to World's Tonic.

When I went home from the mill I was sick. I never felt well. The result of a long series of troubles after having the flu. I never expected to go back to work. . . . husband, Mr. Alfred Pfaff, employed at the big mill in Farrell, Pa. For months I had been getting weaker and weaker. Some of the home medicines I tried gave me relief. I appeared to have a general breakdown. My stomach caused me the most trouble. No matter how I dieted or what I took, food did not agree with me. My stomach was sour all the time, and it formed gas that swelled me up and distressed me greatly.

This affected me liver, which was sluggish most of the time. I had severe headaches and bilious spells. I was a bag of bones. I forced to move around as I was afraid I might fall into the hot steel and get burned or perhaps lose my life. My breath was bad, and I belched gas after every meal. Altogether I was very miserable and was losing weight. One of my buddies who brought me home from the mill, urged me to try World's Tonic, the new medicine that he said was gathered from different parts of the world. Because I did not know what else to do, I let him have a bottle sent up from the drug store. If anybody had told me all it would do for me I would not have believed it.

My headache quit me, liver woke me to its job, and after a couple of weeks my stomach did its work again, how my bowels move regular three times every day. I slept well, and soon I began to gain weight. In just five weeks I felt as well as I ever did, and I went back to the job. Since then I have felt fine, and I owe it all to World's Tonic, the most wonderful medicine I have ever heard of."

World's Tonic can be obtained at Boggs, Mellon & Liggett's Macdowell or of any other first-class drug store. (A-93)

FRANCO-ITALIAN BREACH HEALS

PARIS, July 15.—(INS)—An era of good feeling between France and Italy seemed in prospect today after Premier Mussolini's assurance a naval holiday will be in order for the balance of the year.

Notice to that effect was delivered by the Italian ambassador to Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, who previously had announced France would refrain from further shipbuilding this year.

Briand immediately indicated that he planned to seize the intermittent period to further improve Italo-French relations through a series of conversations aiming at the ironing out of all obstacles to friendly relations between the two countries. A letdown in the bitter anti-French campaign in the press of Italy already has been noted.

First Call Since Winter Finds Pumper Loss

CANTON, O., July 15.—(AP)—Whatever his belief before the fire chief at Sugar Creek, Tuscarawas County, is all for preparedness.

The volunteer department got its first call since last winter. Chains on the real wheels of the pumper occasioned a brief delay. On the way to the blaze—a grass fire on the edge of the village—the gasoline gave out. When the pumper reached the scene after a passing motorist had brought gasoline, citizens had beat out the fire with brooms.

As the truck pulled into the station returning from the fire, two tires blew out.

JADWIN TO TAKE PRIVATE POST

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(Universal)—Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, former chief of the U. S. Army Engineers, has withdrawn his name from consideration as chairman of the newly organized Federal Power Commission.

The decision of Jadwin was made known in a statement by Secretary of War Hurley, who declared the former chief of engineers was not "available" for membership on the commission. He is to accept a private engineering office, it was learned.

Jadwin's name was announced as the choice of President Hoover for the chairmanship of the new Power Commission shortly after Congress passed the new Federal Power Commission Act.

As soon as the choice of the President was made known, however, there were rumbles of serious opposition in the Senate, should Jadwin's name be submitted for confirmation.

Girl Drowns Self As Bridegroom Comes to U. S.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.—(AP)—When Dr. Helidore von Bechen, German scientist, crossing the Atlantic to claim a bride, reaches New York he will learn his fiancee, Miss Dorothy Lewis, 26, leaped to her death from a ferry boat off Alcatraz Island early today, an unexplained suicide.

She was returning with friends to her home here from an outing when she suddenly jumped overboard.

Miss Lewis, a hostess in a tea room here, met Dr. Von Bechen two years ago. Eight months ago she went to Berlin to be married, but decided she wanted to be married here.

TOKIO FLIERS DELAY START

TACOMA, Wash., July 15.—(AP)—Delayed while experts groom their motors, pilots of two planes which may race from Tacoma to Tokio today said their flights had been postponed until Friday or perhaps even later. The fliers had expected to take off Thursday.

Harold Bromley, who expects to fly the monoplane City of Tacoma across the Pacific, said it would take a day or so to get his craft in shape.

The motor is being overhauled on The Pacific Era. Robert Wark and Eddie Brown, Seattle pilots, said 10 hours' test flying would be needed before the take-off.

California Grape Co-op Plan Fails

FRESNO, Cal., July 15.—(AP)—Failure today marked the initial efforts to organize California's grape industry into a federal farm board-sponsored co-operative.

Attempts to sign up 85 per cent or 441,000 acres of vineyards failed by 38,000 acres on the basis of reports last midnight, when the campaign officially closed.

BOSTON MARKS TERCENTENARY

BOSTON, July 15.—(INS)—Massachusetts today celebrated her achievements since the founding of the Bay Colony 300 years ago.

The military and naval parade was reviewed by Gov. Frank G. Allen and Mayor James M. Curley.

Heading the long list of guests were former President Calvin Coolidge, Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, ambassadors from foreign countries and the governors of many states.

At the exercises on the Common, the orator was the Rt. Hon. Herbert Albert Laurens Fisher, F. R. S., warden of New College, Oxford, England. William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston and dean of the Catholic hierarchy in America, offered the invocation.

Former Mayor of Toronto, O., Suicide

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 15.—Edward Stewart, 65, former mayor of Toronto, O., was found dead in his home in that town last midnight, shot through the head, Coroner A. L. Bell rendered a verdict of suicide. Stewart was a real estate operator and a member of Toronto City Council. Ill health and despondency over the death of his wife prompted his act, it is believed.

FURNACE CRIME STIRS MAINE

PORTLAND, Me., July 15.—(INS)—A change in the state laws to return the death penalty or life imprisonment without pardon for first degree murder, was being discussed today following the alleged furnace slaying of Lillian I. MacDonald, 21-year-old stenographer, for which James M. Mitchell, 21, is being held without bail.

He was committed to the Cumberland County jail pending action at the September session of the grand jury or until defense counsel gets an order from the court that he be taken to the State Hospital for the Insane for observation.

The latter move appeared almost certain, following Mitchell's denial to counsel that he had made a confession to County Attorney Ralph M. Ingalls.

Tramping all over town in search of an apartment is no simple matter. Finding one through the convenience of Classified Ads is. Turn to the Classified Section now.

HOLDS TARIFF HOOVER 'DEBT'

BOSTON, July 15. (AP.)—The charge that the enactment of the Grundy tariff bill was part of a calculated movement to repay the large contributors to the Hoover campaign fund at the expense of the common citizen, was made by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, in an address here. He said the Republican party was split asunder and the Democrats would occupy a commanding position in Congress after the November elections.

Attacking the tariff, Chairman Shouse said:

"It has been urged that President Hoover was reluctant in carrying out the bargain. Perhaps he was reluctant to incur the liability of such a barefaced levy, but even the political danger to his individual fortunes was not enough to prevent his signing the bill. As between the peril of the enmity of the voiceless multitude, and the more direct threat of the purveyors of campaign funds, he did not hesitate."

CITY FIGHTING VALUATION CUT

WHEELING, W. Va., July 15.—(AP.)—The City of Wheeling has gone to the courts seeking to prevent the Ohio County Board of Equalization and Review from making effective a 25 per cent cut on real estate valuation in the county.

Judge J. Harold Brennan, in Ohio County Circuit Court, heard an injunction petition in which City Solicitor Carl O. Schmidt asked that Assessor Karl D. Sailer be required to turn over to the city the original assessment values within the city limits. Prosecutor A. C. Schiffler opposed the petition, saying compliance with the city's request would nullify the reduction ruling of the review board.

4 Men Hold Up Armored Truck

NEW YORK, July 15. (AP.)—Forcing an armored truck to the curb at a crowded intersection in downtown Brooklyn, four men in a touring car held up the messenger and driver and escaped with $18,000 in cash and $5,000 in checks.

Erie's Main Line Traffic Blocked

MEADVILLE, Pa., July 15.—(AP.)—Main line traffic on the Erie Railroad was re-routed last night after the tracks had been blocked at Cambridge Springs when 14 cars left the rails. No one was injured. Several of the cars carried iron ore.

WANTS U. S. AID FOR JOBLESS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Hope that the provision for advance planning of government building projects would be restored to the Wagner unemployment bill at the next session of Congress was expressed in a statement by Representative O'Connor (Rep.) of Oklahoma, who said this was the only legislative means by which unsatisfactory economic situations could be relieved.

The advance planning provision of the bill which reached the conference stage before adjournment was stricken from the Senate measure by the House. This section of the bill, the Oklahoman said, would enable public works to be held back as a reserve for periods of acute unemployment. He said:

"The government should hold back its projects from competing with private industry in times of prosperity, and then enter the field immediately and furnish employment when private industry slows down or slackens."

Policeman Slayer Granted New Trial

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 15.—(AP)—J. A. Simmons, former Hinton policeman, convicted in Summers County of murder in the second degree and sentenced to eight years imprisonment, was granted an appeal by the State Supreme Court. Simmons was charged with shooting William Fox during a raid on a moonshine still near Ironton, March 5.

Publisher Seeks Seat in Senate

CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 15.—(AP)—United States Senator Patrick Sullivan has advised W. C. Deming, Cheyenne publisher, he would not seek election for the unexpired term of the late Senator Francis E. Warren, nor for the six-year term in the Senate. Deming immediately filed notice of his candidacy on the Republican ticket.

KOREAN FLOODS DROWN 120

LONDON, July 14.—(AP.)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokio reports that 120 persons were drowned in floods in Korea on Sunday. Many others are reported missing, including 50 priests.

The Taikyu dispatch indicated floods in Keishohokudo Province were the worst of the last week's series of disasters in Southern Korea. One river rose about 16 feet, washing away a Buddhist temple. 50 monks of which were reported missing. The island of Formosa also was suffering from torrential rains. Dispatches reported five deaths from various parts of the island.

Seoul dispatches said many persons were injured by floods. Landslides in the Taikyu district took heavy toll of life and property. Scores of thousands were homeless.

Bogus Death Wire Gets Wife Home From Visit

AKRON, O., July 14.—(AP.)—Desperate situations require desperate remedies, is the theory of W. H. Doctor. And when a wife goes on a vacation an almost certain way to bring her home is to telegraph that her husband is dead.

Doctor tried the idea last Thursday, addressing the telegram to his wife, Mrs. Betty Doctor, in Scranton, Pa. He signed it with another man's name.

The system worked, however. Mrs. Doctor was home here today but her husband was in a hospital with a nervous breakdown.

Search on for Actress To Play Lead in 'Mothers Cry'

BY HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 14

Despite a prolonged search, Warner Brothers are not yet determined upon the actress who will play the lead in "Mother's Cry."

Paths was approached for the loan of Ann Harding, and she was anxious to do the role, but the studio was adamant. As a result, the choice appears to have narrowed down to one of two ingenue actresses, Lois Cahill or Dorothy Peterson.

Two [illegible] will be [illegible] which [illegible] cries.

[illegible] and Helen Chandler, [illegible] to the talkies. These [illegible] and specialty [illegible] theaters and are widely attended [illegible] the film people.

[illegible] new stars at a single [illegible] of Gorky's "Lower Depths" by the Playshop than at [illegible] down-[illegible] theaters. There were Olive Borden, Theda Bara and her husband, Charles Bleckin, Miss Patsy Campbell, Lionel Belmore and Gertrude Astor.

Many new plays are [illegible] produced in these theaters in the hope that a [illegible] producer will see a play [illegible] them. Indeed the regular commercial theaters here are becoming more and more a show window for prospective talkie [illegible].

Seasoned actors likewise on parade are afflicted by the worst type of stage fright. The knowledge of the film stars and producers out front on opening nights has a panicky effect on them. And no wonder, for every actor who gives a good performance in a Los Angeles theater receives immediate offers from the movies. A hit here may mean a fortune. They have the added advantage, too, of being on the ground. A good performance on Broadway creates a temporary ripple in Hollywood, but unless the actor is immediately signed he is forgotten.

Motion picture gag-men and dialogue writers are often accused of borrowing their material from magazines.

Anne Caldwell, who put here writing memoirs for R-K-O, says she has discovered a case of the shoe on the other foot. Picking up a magazine the other day she read the following joke:

Child—"Mother, who puts the perfume on the flowers?"

Mother—"The gardener, dear. I saw him spraying them this morning."

According to Anne, she originally wrote that joke in 1915 for Victor Herbert's operetta, "Lady of the Slipper."

REMAKE MELODRAMA

Out at First National they're assigning Fred Kohler to do the heavy in the talkie version of "Captain Blood." This is the role that Allan Forrest had in the old Vitagraph silent version. James Reddie now plays the Sabatini hero, whereas J. Warren Kerrigan did it in the old days. "Captain Blood" was the picture that broke Vitagraph's back. It was a big money-maker, but the costs of the film was said to be upwards of $2,000,000.

Warners and First National fell heir to the story when Vitagraph was purchased. Now Frank Lloyd is directing it.

Made possible by the world-wide facilities of the Fox Hearst Corporation, Hearst Metrotone News in its current issue presents the first sound motion pictures of the uprising of the natives in India under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi.

When the first indications of disorder were heard from India, the Fox Hearst Corporation dispatched a photographic and sound recording unit to Bombay. The members of the staff arrived there just before the orders of Gandhi started their first great demonstration, which culminated in the march to the sea, where they made salt in defiance of the British regulations. Hearst Metrotone News presents in pictures and in sound the march of 300,000 natives through the picturesque streets of Bombay. It is one of the most graphic sound motion pictures ever filmed.

'WILD COMPANY,' TALE OF FIERY YOUTH, IN SHERIDAN

By KAYE GODARD

"Wild Company," a story of modern youth and its reckless freedom, is on the Sheridan Square screen. It runs true to type with its theme of the engaging and careless youngsters of the rich who carry their freedom too far. However, it's cleverly done.

H. B. Warner takes the part of the influential man of the town. He owns a big department store, has most of the money, and has interesting ideas about cleaning up the town and ridding it of its numerous vices. His son, Frank Albertson, has other ideas and spends most of his time, and a large portion of his father's money, tearing around at top speed and consuming large quantities of drink. His money appeals to a bunch of efficient gold-diggers and they immediately take him into their exclusive circle, with motives that aren't all they might be. It winds up in the murder of a night club proprietor and the rich lad is pronounced guilty.

Well, it's an interesting and vivid tale, and its saving grace is the good characterization of the wealthy business man, and the understanding and tact of the judge who presides at the trial of the boy. The reckless living of petted youth is presented in a highly alluring manner and the contrast made by the murder trial and the unfortunate events which lead up to it is a rather strong one.

A news reel, a cartoon comedy, a Mickey Maguire comedy, and a Grantland Rice Sportlight help the program along immensely.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor.

A TABLOID VERSION of Beethoven's "Fifth Symphony" will be the musical highlight of a narrative depicting the life and works of the great German composer in tonight's Eveready Hour on WCAE at 9 o'clock.

Musicians regard the "Fifth Symphony" as the most perfect composition in this form. Others of his outstanding works will include "Trio in B Flat" and the "Ninth Symphony."

Vee Lawnhurst

Acting as her own accompanist, Vee Lawnhurst will croon "I Like to Do Things for You," and "A Cottage for Sale" on the Tea program over KDKA at 9.

Always remembering the children and dedicating a portion of her concert to them whenever possible, the Sponsor of Sacred Songs has listed "Precious Jewels" especially for them tonight. Elizabeth Lloyd Kirkpatrick, soprano, will sing "My Heavenly Father Knows" as another feature of this program at 7:30 over KDKA.

Our little dissertation on radio announcers Sunday just fanned the flame of curiosity among many folk.

William Pfaff, fellow columnist wants us to print the test. There's the catch—there is no printed test.

* * *

This is to preclude someone memorizing names and phrases and passing them on to the next fellow.

Would-be announcers are received at KDKA on Friday and at WCAE, WJAS and KQV by appointment only. At KDKA Frederick G. Rodgers, general program manager of Westinghouse stations, puts them through the ropes.

Applicants are taken into the studio one at a time and the other applicants are barred from hearing him.

GET SET' GO!

There is no ostentation. The applicant is handed a continuity and told to go ahead. If he stops to study the manuscript he's already a failure. Announcers must be of sufficient ability to handle any sort of a program on quick notice.

* * *

If he gets through the first continuity successfully and shows promise he is handed another and more difficult manuscript . . . etc. . . . etc. . . .

THEIR WATERLOO

Applicants go down most on names. These are the ones most frequently mispronounced: Saint Saens (which is French with a nasal sound and frequently executed by the announcer punching nostrils); Tschaikowsky (as easily pronounced as it is spelled); Beethoven (always tricky to the novice); Pavirieau (the musical coach for Westinghouse Salute); Johannes Brahms (which, oddly enough, takes in all the syllables); Mendelssohn, DeBussy, Bellini, Bach and Egni.

Oh, yes, there's one more—Faure, which looks like it might have as many pronunciations as an octopus has tentacles.

ANOTHER TOUGH ONE

Our librarian, G. Dare Fleck, program manager of KDKA, informs us that there are two gentlemen with this name. The Frenchman's name is pronounced "Fo-ra" and the Englishman's plain "Fore" like you holler when making a hole in one. Mr. Fleck gives Stephen Leyshon the wreath for correctly pronouncing these names at all times. Stephen may be heard on the Sacred Song program tonight.

* * *

If you want a general idea of how hard it is to read before the microphone, tune in Westinghouse Salute this evening. It's one of the hardest continuities we've seen. But Frederick G. Rodgers and Lou Kaufman handle it like nothing at all.

* * *

Name of the composition most frequently mispronounced: Rimsky-Korsakof's "Scheherazade," which is a tongue-twister if there ever was one.

The microphone waits for no one. Picture yourself staring at some of these names for the first time . . .

BEST LAST NIGHT:

Henry Burbig — "We now present the heavyweight song from Cleopatra, 'I've got a feeling I'm fouling.'"

Phil Cook — "When someone hollered 'Foul!' she asked, dumblike, 'Where are the feathers?' And how she did fall when I told her there were no feathers, the fighters were 'picked.'"

Floyd Gibbons — "The progress of youth has come to a sit-still."

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Electrical transcriptions for radio broadcasts are unlike phonograph records in that they run from the center to the rim. This is to eliminate the "drag" or scratch noise of the needle. The largest of these records is 18 inches in diameter and runs for 15 minutes.

THE OFFICE WIFE

Eaton Tells Anne's Dad He Wants to Marry Her

CHAPTER XXXIV

The days grew unbearably hot. Jim, who had settled his family in a Long Island cottage, announced that his mother and Anne must go to Sara's and get some sea air and sound sleep.

Jim had been told of the broken engagement. He made no comment except, slangily, "Well, use your own judgment, kid," but his eyes, resting on Anne, were more satisfied, less anxious.

Anne and her mother went out to Sara's by car one Saturday afternoon, Jim and Murdock driving them and returning Sunday. The cottage was a small one on the ocean.

Anne ate and slept, grew tanned and lost the lines went from her face and the nervousness from her hands. It seemed to her that she was caught up in an interlude of peace set to the music of the sea. She would watch it for hours, the broken unity of the waves, the struggle each incoming breaker made to complete the full circle and the final foaming frustration.

Life was like that, she thought, buoyant, rushing, striving, always beaten, always rising again, always repeating the endeavor, always falling short—but in beauty, of the full circle, the absolute perfection.

Betty Howard wrote her from New York.

"Ted tells us that your engagement is broken. I'm sorry, Anne. I thought you two youngsters would be happy. But you know best. You're wise to find out in time." She went on with news of herself and the boy, and concluded: "The office is rather at a standstill since the chief went away."

So he'd gone. It came to Anne as an absolute shock that she did not know Lawrence Eaton had left the city, perhaps the country—she who once had known all his plans.

Eaton Sees Linda

He had not gone far. He was staying at his club. But he found that his work went badly, that nothing was right. So he did something he hadn't done in years: he took a vacation and went up to Westchester and played golf and imagined that he was feeling better.

Sanders came up once to see him and, in the course of their business conversation, told him idly: "The engagement between Anne Murdock and O'Hara is off. No reason given, of course. Just—off."

Trying to control his joy, Eaton asked casually: "Is she still with the Barrows?"

"No. I heard she'd left some time ago."

Then, thought Eaton, if she'd given up the other job, now that Linda's divorce had gone through and the whole stupid affair with the press had blown over, perhaps she'd come back.

It seemed to him that he wanted her back in his office, working beside him on any terms, so long as he had her with him again.

Linda came back to town and wrote him: "Would you meet me somewhere, quite quietly?" she asked. "I want to talk to you, Larry."

So he met her for luncheon one day. They talked of Europe, of people. Then, over her iced tea, Linda stated:

Advice From Linda

"Dick and I are going to be married in the autumn. I'm sailing again, we'll marry in England and live there indefinitely. I wanted you to know."

He said, aching with poignant, inescapable regret: "Thank you, Linda. I want you to be happy."

"I shall be. And you?"

"Oh, I don't matter."

"Yes, you do." Abruptly she asked him, "Is Anne Murdock still with you?"

"No. She's engaged. That is, she was engaged," he answered carefully.

"Engaged?"

"To be married. But it's been broken."

"Anne?" Linda's brown eyes were wide. "Had she left the office?"

Eaton explained the situation to her; the newspaper gossip, Anne's resignation, his learning of her engagement, his more recent news.

Linda listened, exclaimed indignantly and then said thoughtfully: "Poor child."

Eaton didn't answer. There was nothing to say.

Linda, leaning forward, her transparent hat tilted over her lovely, kind eyes, says: "Larry, I must talk to you, for the last time." A little silence fell and then she went on: "It is Anne, isn't it?"

Yes. But when I knew it was too late," he answered, low.

"You are very blind," she told him. "She's been in love with you all along. Can't you see it? This engagement—camouflage and issue of unhappiness. Now it's dissolved. She was wise—and in time. Larry, I don't advise. I don't even comment. But don't make the gravest mistake of your life. Don't."

After a moment he promised and his gray eyes were shining. "I won't."

Later they shook hands and parted.

Eaton stayed in town. He went directly to Anne's flat and found it closed.

After a time he dug out an address book and found the street and number of Anne's home. He drove out there through the dusty town.

Evening had fallen when he arrived. Murdock was home, puttering around the yard in his shirt sleeves, and Kathleen was there, too, having arrived unannounced as the road show had closed in the Middle West.

Eaton went up on the porch. Murdock, a rake in his hand, following. He introduced himself and explained his errand.

"Anne's in the country," said her father, and asked bluntly, "What do you want of her?"

Kathleen, who had been presented in a rather informal fashion, listened, watching Eaton's face.

Explains to Her Dad

"I thought I might persuade her to return to us," Eaton answered. "I understand that she and Mr. O'Hara——"

"That's her business," Murdock said, with disarming rudeness.

Eaton looked at Murdock's hostile face at Kathleen's lovely eyes and her lips curved to a smile. He urged:

"If I could have her address?"

"Of course you can!" Kathleen cried.

Murdock said doggedly: "If she wants to go back to work in the fall she can come to see you later."

Eaton thought, "What's the use of all this talk and animosity? I can't blame him. She's his child." He turned a direct gaze to Murdock.

"I'd better be frank," he said. "It concerns you as much as it does me. I love Anne, Mr. Murdock. I wish to find her in order to ask her to marry me."

Stilted the little speech sounded, but the sense was clear enough. Kathleen's breath escaped her in a gasp of happiness, but Murdock's face was clouded.

"She's not in your class," he said brusquely.

"Come," answered Eaton, "you don't think that. Not really. You believe, do you not, that she's good enough for any man, and too good for all of them?"

Murdock smiled reluctantly.

Accompanied by Kathleen

"I do," he said, and after a moment held out his hand. "If she loves you," he told Eaton, "that's all that matters. I don't approve of mixing the classes, but it happens every day, and I guess it works out. Her mother may be difficult. You are a divorced man, Mr. Eaton, and Molly has her notions on the subject. The children—they have their own ways of looking at things. I wished them to."

Eaton took the other man's hand and held it in a firm clasp.

"I'll be good to her," he told Anne's father, in the simplest language of all, the language of the inarticulate heart.

He turned to Kathleen. Murdock, with a nod, went back to weeding his little yard. Kathleen said, still breathless:

"I'm so glad."

"Are you? And shall I be?" he asked.

"I hope so," Kathleen told him, but betrayed no confidence.

"Her engagement——" began Eaton.

"You didn't understand that?" Kathleen questioned. "But you will."

And that was all. He arranged to call for her the following morning and take her to Sara's with him. "My ambassador," he told her, smiling.

He went back to town, to his club. And left, after a practically sleepless night, early in the morning to pick up Kathleen and drive her down. He listened to her chatter, thinking that every mile brought him nearer, nearer. . . .

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, July 16

A particularly lively and progressive day may be looked for, according to the lunar, as well as mutual aspects. Many new interests and connections, personal and also business, will arise, with the prospect of favors, preferment, increase and promotion for those in employment. It is a time for pushing for these, and for endeavoring to reach those in places of position and power, in order to advance one's self. New projects are in order, and, personally, a note of romance is dominant.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of new ventures and enterprises, with the prospect of advancement, progress and success, especially through the offices and preferment of those in places of authority and power. The personal affairs should likewise thrive, and, perhaps, be complexioned by romance.

A child born on this day may be brilliant and versatile as well as personally endowed with those qualities and graces making for success, honors and position in life.

Failure of Those Seemingly Endowed for Success Has a Reason—Fay King

FAY-KING

By FAY KING

We sometimes meet persons who are so bright and clever we cannot account for the fact that they do not arrive at the success their talents indicate.

What we do not suspect is that they often also have faults which can undo all that their ability and ambitions might accomplish. Sometimes it is an unreasonable temper. Sometimes a periodical weakness for drunk and dissipation. Or they lack discipline and reliability.

There is usually a good reason for failure where success should be.

Many a girl is convinced that such an attractive charming man could not be at fault when his wife divorced him.

She has married him and found to her sorrow that he was secretly addicted to drugs, and has in turn divorced him.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

Madge Calmly Proceeds With Her Plans

When the cartridges from Dicky's service revolver at last were in my hand and the weapon impotent to harm—except to protect—lay before me on my husband's writing desk, I found myself trembling as if I had just conclusively distanced some murderous thing pursuing me.

For a few seconds I stood motionless, forcing myself to calmness that I might consider the possible consequences of my action so at variance with all my ideals and yet so necessitated by my fears for Junior and Dicky's refusal to unload his revolver before locking it away.

That Dicky would be furiously angry when he found out what I had done, I knew, but I also knew that he could not be more contemptuous of what he would term my "sneakiness" than I was myself. But my premonition that something evil would come of a revolver left loaded in the house with two restless and energetic small boys was so obsessing a thing as to armor me against either my own contempt or my husband's.

When would Dicky find out the trick I had played upon him? I hoped that it would remain my secret until after the holidays had passed and the Harrison boys were safely back in their Detroit home. But my common sense told me that unless Dicky were unusually absent-minded he would discover what had happened when he transferred the revolver from the writing desk to the secret wall safe which he was planning to equip with a lock.

But I told myself comfortingly, at least I had a day's respite from worry, for Dicky could do nothing about the lock until he had returned from the hunting trip with his two older nephews. So I resolutely shut out all thoughts of any day save the present one, and locked the revolver away again in the place where Dicky kept it. The cartridges I kept with the grim reflection that hanging for a sheep involved no more discomfort than for a lamb. I searched Dicky's room until I found his cartridges and took them all to the room I was occupying during the holidays because of our many guests.

My spirits rose, despite my guilty conscience, as I locked all the cartridges safely away with the certainty that Dicky would have to make a trip to a shop and purchase more before he could load his revolver again. And it was with the resolve to let no further thought of the weapon trouble me that I took up the list of things I had planned for the day.

The promised explanation to my mother-in-law of what my early visit to the basement with its untoward frightening of Katie had meant an interview with my father about the changes in the big cellar room I wished to make for the boys' Christmas—a call upon the Tigers to set in motion the plans I had evolved and the expedition of the two small boys for Christmas greens—how should I get them all in? I quailed before the prospect for an instant, then squared my shoulders and went in search of Katherine.

"Could Noel spare you a few minutes longer?" I asked.

Katherine smiled and motioned toward the open door.

"Listen, and your question will be answered," she said.

Through the opened door of Noel's room came the sound of a guitar softly strummed in accompaniment to Mary's lovely voice singing old ballads which are the young musician's favorites.

"I have no further scruples," I laughed. "Will you get Junior and Roderick—with provisions and equipment—ready for a trip for Christmas greens with the accompaniment of a picnic lunch in the woods?"

"With a fagot fire and broiled bacon?" Katherine supplemented, and I nodded as I hastily explained my Christmas plans, and my program for the day. The last words had not left my lips when Katherine took me by the shoulders and turned me toward the door.

"With a program like that, don't waste time in explanations," she said. "Get goin' chile. I'll see to the youngsters."

She kept her promise royally. When, after a long interview with my mother-in-law, who insisted upon quizzing me exhaustively and carpingly about the Christmas plans, and a shorter colloquy with my father, who enthusiastically indorsed everything in readiness, Roderick and Junior dressed for the woods, save for their caps and outer coats, were standing guard over the campfire equipment and the luncheon boxes in the side hall.

"You'll witness an authentic case of spontaneous combustion if they have to wait much longer," Katherine whispered, adding aloud: "But isn't anyone else going with you?"

I shook my head regretfully.

"Father has a cold. Noel, of course is out of the question, and Mary——"

From the stairs above us came Mary's voice, raucous, shaken.

"But Mary isn't out of the question. Please, Auntie Madge, take me with you. I shall stifle if I stay in this house another minute."

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The woman with the ever-developed bust can reduce easily enough; all she has to do is to find a river or lake, get a boat and go rowing. The movements of the arms—strong, muscular movements—necessary for propelling a boat tightens up those muscles that go scooting round from chest to shoulders, from shoulders to back. Bathing with cold salt water helps.

Corns are caused by pressure. Remove the pressure and they disappear. If we never wore shoes we'd never have corns. Soft corns between the toes can be cured by sprinkling with powdered prepared chalk, which is an absorbent, and covering with small pads of cotton. Never use iodine on corns that have been cut; compound tincture of benzoin is better.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Lovers and Husbands

There are two kinds of husbands, just as there are two kinds of houses: the kind that is a good paying investment—and the kind that is just a luxury.

* * *

An optimist is a man who goes through life without an umbrella or a wife, in the cheerful confidence that he can always borrow some other fellow's.

All men may be born equal, but all women will never get an even break, until they are all born blondes!

* * *

When a man is thrown overboard, he can always manage to float around, until some other woman picks him up—or to swim ashore and land in some other woman's arms.

Alas, the moment a girl begins to take a lot of stock in a man's love, it ceases to declare any dividends, and suddenly drops to low.

Nearly every man goes into marriage, with the secret conviction that a woman needs a strong man's will to guide her; and nearly every woman goes to the altar under the impression that a man needs a "mother" and a guardian. And that's where the battle begins!

The only thing that appears to make the modern girl blush is to have to confess that she has never been kissed.

* * *

Perfect lovers and good husbands, unlike poets, are not born but made. WOMAN-made! Nearly every happily married woman owes her felicity to some other woman's skill, some other woman's training, or some other woman's misplay.

The modern girl appears to spend most of her time either beautifying the flesh, shocking the world, or daring the devil.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Married Woman's Signature

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me the proper way to sign a check? Also a charge account. I am married. This has always been a great puzzle to me.

ONE IN DOUBT.

The best form, and the one most often used by a married woman when she is signing her checks is the use of the first and last names of her maiden name before the last name of her married name:

MARY SMITH BROWNE.

She will always be correct if she signs her checks in this way. However, if she wishes to omit the last name of her maiden name she may do this correctly, and sign her checks:

MARY BROWNE.

Her charge accounts she registers in her formal name: MRS. EDWARD ALAN BROWNE.

Honoring the Groom's Father

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am engaged to be married and my intended husband and I have been planning our wedding party. We are going to have a church wedding; nothing elaborate, but we want it to be correct and, therefore, I am writing to you. My future husband is an only son, and in deciding for his best man, he wants his father to take that position. Is that proper?

M. S.

Yes, entirely proper, and to me one of the most charming gestures that a man can make to his father. And how honored will be that father, to have a son that wishes to give this honor to him!

A Swimming Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I wonder if it would be correct to give a swim near an inn, and have the breakfast at this inn right after the swim?

2. What time would you suggest for this affair?

3. Where would you have the girls come—to my home or to the inn?

READER.

1. Yes—this is a plan for a charming party.

2. This would depend on the general convenience—ten or half after ten, I should say.

3. It would probably be more convenient for everyone to meet you at the inn.

Household Hints

The bannisters are so often dusted but not so frequently washed and they accumulate a great deal of grease and dirt in a short time, particularly if there are children in the home. Wash off the dirt with soap and water and when dry rub with two parts linseed oil and one part turpentine. Rub well and note results.

Powdered charcoal is an excellent tooth whitener.

Vinegar and salt will remove the stains from fish bowls.

When the cleanser can seems empty, open the top with a can opener and you will have enough for a day's use.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

What Would YOU Do, Ethel, Alice, Patsy if the Boy Friend Went Off and Married Another Girl?

Would you rush into court and sue him for breach of promise?

Do you think that money can mend a broken heart . . . or salve injured pride?

Louise had her diamond . . . and thought that wedding bells were going to ring for her in June . . . and now she finds her Romeo's planning to give her the run-around . . . to marry a rich girl.

"Whatever shall I do" she moans. "My heart is broken! No one knows what suffering I've gone through! Shall I sue him?"

Here's the whole story. It's an eyeful.

Dear Sally Martin:

"I never dreamed that some day I'd have to come to you for advice, maybe sympathy. But here I am along with the rest of them. I'm just broken-hearted.

"Here's my story.

"I have gone with a doctor off and one for the last two years and last Christmas we became engaged.

"After I received my diamond he didn't come to see me as much as he had before, although he never did see me so much. Usually once a week, and then sometimes not for two weeks. Do you believe he really loved me? I thought at the time that he did, and that he didn't come oftener was because he wasn't of an affectionate nature, but I was all wrong, I guess.

"Anyway, about two months ago he acted 'queer' and when I asked him to a banquet that we were invited to he refused without any reason what soever. I felt pretty bad about it, as the tickets were already bought and I had planned on going. We had a few words about it and since then I haven't heard from him.

"Now I hear that he is going to be married next month to a very wealthy girl . . . and all the plans we made together (we were to have been married in June) he is carrying out with this other girl.

"You can just imagine how I feel, just to think of all my dreams smashed! It's terrible.

"Shall I go up to his office and see him? Of course I couldn't ask him to come back. My pride won't permit that. But do you think it would be worth while to sue him for breach of promise?

"I really believe he needs money at this time, and that the fact that this girl is rich is influencing him. Then, too, his mother and sister never did think much of the idea of him marrying me.

"No one can understand what terrible misery I am going through at the present time. I can't eat or sleep. It's dreadful. Please, please tell me what you think I should do. Maybe if you sympathize with me I might feel better.

"If you can help me I'll thank you from the bottom of my heart, if I have any left. Please tell me what you think. Should I sue him? What can I do about it all?

LOUISE.

LET HIM GO

What can you do, Louise?

Let this man go. What else is there to do? It's plain that he no longer loves you. And he has a perfect right to fall out of love with you if he wants to. Love isn't something that he can put on to order like a coat. And you won't buy yourself a thing by acting as if it were.

Yes, I know your heart's sore. You're disappointed and your pride's been nicked. But if the shoe'd been on the other foot, wouldn't you have considered that you had a right to change your mind? Sure you would; and in that case all the doctor would have gotten out of the wreck of his dreams would have been his diamond and a few "I'm so sorrys" from you.

Shall you sue him for breach of promise?

Certainly not! If you had ever really loved him you wouldn't be asking. Oh, I know you feel dreadful over this blow you've received. But it isn't your heart that's been knocked for a goal—it's your conceit, sister. So you immediately picture yourself in a crowded courtroom, dressed to impress a susceptible jury, and with plenty of reporters making flashes of you . . . making him pay.

I'll admit that it's a grand graft lady. As a publicity stunt it's a whizz . . . and you just love the idea of weeping gracefully in front of a sympathetic world . . .

But as a matter of fact a breach of promise racketeeress is just about as pretty as a dose of the smallpox . . . and a woman whose broken heart can be mended with cash hasn't any.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Guard Against Industrial Accidents

Better judgment at work and greater care after injury will benefit the industrial worker. If these were exercised more men and women in industry would be saved from suffering and perhaps death.

DR COPELAND

It is an encouraging sign that fatal accidents in factories are being kept down to a low average. Also, it is good to know that fatal accidents due to falls are fewer than usual.

Many of these accidents are due to falls from scaffolds, ladders, stairs, windows and other heights in the construction of buildings. Great care must be exercised to avoid them.

We read from a recent report by Miss Frances Perkins on state-wide accidents that falling objects cause a very large number of deaths. Perhaps these are unavoidable, but that there is a laxity in the law covering these accidents there is no doubt. Every precaution should be taken by the individual worker and the individual construction company that the safety of all be assured so far as it is humanly possible.

Compensation mitigates many of the financial anxieties due to accidents. But it never mitigates the suffering and incapacity of the victim of an accident.

Every worker should be instructed to obtain at once proper treatment and dressings for even a slight cut or abrasion of the skin. Too often they are neglected, infection takes place and blood poisoning sets in, sometimes terminating fatally. Prompt care in such cases saves much suffering and human life.

Industrial workers, both men and women, are under constant strain and stress. Sometimes the strain results in hernia. We are told by Miss Perkins in her report that strains violent enough to cause hernia are likely to have serious after effects. She says that month after month cases of pneumonia are reported after hernia operations and many are fatal.

It is not always the fault of the employers, who, I believe, are humane and conscientious about the welfare of their workmen. They are more and more carrying on educational campaigns among workers for accident prevention.

Almost every precaution imaginable may be taken, but accidents happen anyhow. There are hazards to overcome and a worker must ever be on guard to keep within the safety zone.

TAPLIN BARES RAIL PRICE

WASHINGTON July 15 (AP) —Control of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad cost the Pennroad Corporation $170 per share for the 222,930 shares of the corporation's common stock which it bought last fall from F. E. Taplin.

This statement was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by counsel for the Taplin interests in compliance with a commission ruling made last month to which protest was entered by Taplin.

The matter of the cost of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia share was raised in a commission hearing on the application of the Pittsburgh company for authority to purchase control of the Wheeling and Lake Erie.

PAYS ALIMONY, ESCAPES JAIL

WASHINGTON July 15 (AP) —Ralph E. Updike, former Indiana representative and now an employe of the Treasury Department, saved himself from a 30-day jail sentence for contempt of court by the belated payment of $32.50 alimony to Mrs. Updike.

Updike was summoned to the District of Columbia Supreme Court for non-payment of the alimony installment. When his case was called the former member of Congress failed to appear and Justice Jennings Bailey issued the contempt sentence. Before a marshal could find him, however, the delayed alimony was paid. The court order for his arrest will not be served.

YOU NEED AN AUTOMOBILE!

Consider the things you can do . . . the fun you can have . . . if you own an automobile. And then realize how all these things are impossible if you must depend upon other means of transportation.

Ask yourself this question: Would not an automobile be worth all it costs to own and operate? In the vast majority of cases it is. In the first place, it solves the amusement or recreation problem. You are never at a loss as to what to do. By enabling you to spend most of your time in the open it means better health and more productive working hours. The amount of money you save on other and less satisfactory forms of diversion will pay for the operation of your car.

In short, in view of the fact that there are so many splendid used cars for sale at such low prices, there is no reason why you should not own one.

Master Mysteries

By ARTHUR HOERL

A Perfect Crime

What Has Gone Before.

A particularly atrocious murder is discovered in a private room at a speakeasy. There is not a single clue to the identities of either the victim or the criminal, except the victim's cap marked S. S. Delia. The S. S. Delia had foundered some days before in mid-Atlantic with every soul on board.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II.

It was that feeling which prompted Robin Dale to spread himself on the story. Pop Beacon on the night desk squawked a bit. He saw no use of giving unimportant crume so much space. Dale finally talked him into it on its sensational, thrilling qualities, the real reason behind the reporter's act he kept to himself. The case was without a single clue; the only possible way to stir one up was by using a feature story as a come-on.

The plan might fail but if he did not get that story in, it would be an opportunity overlooked. He did not handle the yarn in the obvious manner. He went into detail regarding the frightfulness of the crume, played up the mysterious angle of unknown murderer and unknown victim; devoted a whole paragraph to one useless identifying mark on the inside of the murdered man's hat, and at that point deviating still more from the usual methods. Instead of announcing that the police had at least one person under suspicion, and expected shortly to make an arrest, the story stated definitely and unequivocally that the police were completely at a loss, not only as to the identity of the probable murderer, but also as to the identity of the victim.

The story ran as was. Pop Beacon grunted as he glowered at Dale's copy over his horn-rimmed spectacles.

"Better take tomorrow off, boy. Jardin will probably come in here roarin' like a bull, with a squad of reserves and throw you in jail for contempt of the police."

"Doesn't the slogan on this rag mean anything to you? 'The Truth in News, the News in Truth' . . . I'm goin' by that motto, Pop."

"Okay, boy . . . an' we'll back you up. Now get the hell out of here and let me go to work!"

"Give's a cigaret first."

Something of greater importance occurred next forenoon, before Sergeant Jardin got on the warpath. It was not exactly what Robin Dale had imagined, but it was the first step toward the unraveling of as hideous and diabolical a crime as there is recorded in the records of the New York police department.

Late in the morning a lady appeared at the morgue. She spoke of the Daily Journal story and said she might be able to identify the dead man. She was taken to the slab on which the body lay, but upon viewing it went into hysterics at the ghastly sight. She became so unstrung that the officials at the morgue could get nothing from her. She was taken to Captain Blake's office in the Homicide Bureau, accompanied by an attendant at the morgue.

During this journey, Robin Dale arrived at Capt. Blake's office, and was therefore present when the lady was ushered in. She was a rather pretty, young woman, not over 30, quite frail and extremely nervous and agitated. At first sight she appealed to Dale as a very retiring sort, a "wallflower" type. During the questioning she answered in a low, frightened voice (which seemed to confirm Dale's opinion of her), and quite frequently broke off in sobs in the course of her answers.

She had, she said, reason to feel that the murdered man might be her brother. She was . . . she became almost hysterical at this point . . . unable to identify his features. There were two other marks, however, by means of which he could certainly be identified.

In a low, broken tone she described them: One was a scar on the right thigh—it came to a point, its two sides giving it a jagged appearance. She described the mark minutely, and explained that the wound had been made about four years previous through an accident with a pair of shears. The other mark was a peculiarly-shaped mole about six inches below the heart.

Captain Blake whispered to Jardin (who was present), and the sergeant went into an adjoining room to telephone the morgue. There was nothing further to say until the identification had been made. The young woman sat quite still, her head lowered, sobbing.

Robin Dale could not get his mind off the two marks. There was something eerie about the whole thing. And if they identified the unfortunate, what then? There appeared to be nothing to grasp onto in this case. His thoughts were still jumbled when Jardin came back.

"They're there," he said to Blake.

The young woman gave an involuntary cry.

"It's Harry! It's my brother, Harry . . . Captain Blake came to her chair and comforted her.

"Tell us what you can about him, madam."

Her story was broken with sobs and pauses.

"He was a steward on the Delia. He—he left before her last trip. I've only seen him once since his arrival in New York. He told me he was afraid to make the trip back. It seemed Providence when the terrible disaster took place . . . and now this has happened! What he feared came true . . .

"Do you know what he feared, Mrs. . . . Mrs. . . ." Captain Blake saw she was wearing a wedding ring.

"I'm Mrs. Robertson . . . my husband and I came over with the Delia this trip, he has some business here. My brother is Harry Gibbs . . ."

"But, do you know whom it was he feared, Mrs. Robertson?"

She hesitated a long while. It appeared to be something she did not want to speak of. However, she finally pulled herself together with a perceptible stiffening of her frame.

"It won't do any good to keep silent now. Harry was in with a band who were smuggling things—jewelry, diamonds especially. He wanted to step and be decent. Charlie Wallace, the leader, had threatened him with death, if he didn't go on . . . accused him of wanting to tell the authorities. That's all Harry ever told me, and he did that so I'd know why he left the ship."

"Did he say where this Charlie Wallace was?"

"Harry only mentioned his name that once. I've told you everything I know. Can I—I give poor Harry a decent burial?"

"Of course, Mrs. Robertson. And Sergt. Jardin will now see you home."

Graceful Afternoon Frock
Pattern 1983
Sun-Telegraph Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

The charm and beauty of printed chiffon trimmed with lace is delightfully emphasized in this frock with becomingly styled cape collar and gracefully flared skirt. The figure no longer slim will enjoy this model too as the long line of the vestee and the front bow tend to slenderize.

Pattern 1983 will be equally lovely made of georgette flat crepe voile organdy or lawn. The shadow prints on pastel tones are very popular this summer and most flattering. Cream or ecru lace, organdy or tucked batiste would be suitable for the vestee. Sleeves are optional.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 yards of 39-inch material and ½ yard lace.

DRYS SPURN 'WHISKY REVOLT' FETE

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By WILLIAM PFARR

This is the swimming season and we are anxious that no Sidewalks readers drown. We would not like to see any of Mr. Winchell's readers drown, for that matter, but if somebody must be drowned we are looking out for our own customers first.

That is why we are giving out a bomb-proof system versus drowning. This system is used by Mr. Roy Cotton at the Y. M. C. A. Camp Kon-O-Kwee, which is a good word not to pronounce.

Every eight minutes Mr. Cotton bangs a gong at the swimming pool. This means roll call. The boys must then clasp the hands of their partners and raise said hands in the air as evidence that they have not drowned. So far the system has worked 100 per cent.

The dog races are, for the most part, ended, for a few months and now many Pittsburghers will have to find other places to go at night. No sport caught on as this one did this season. There's no doubt in our mind that the tracks took quite a few customers from the downtown picture houses, the night clubs and the boxing shows.

The New Kensington track, which closed Saturday, attracted the biggest crowds and deserved them, as such des 'ts go. It paid much better odds than the Bridgeville track, which closed last night, and the Aspinwall track. Also, the New Kensington appointments were far superior. If you are so inclined, you can credit your old friend Al Capone, for these advantages. The rumor—but just a rumor—was that Capone not only was the secret owner of the New Kensington layout but visited there two or three times to see how things were going, if not coming.

They say that the New Kensington outfit enjoyed an excellent season and that Bridgeville prospered satisfactorily, but not sensationally. Both tracks are expected to reopen in September.

There was, of course, all kinds of gossip that the races were fixed, but we do not believe this. However, we would like to know what percentage of each bet was taken by the owners. Our opinion, borne out by the results, is that New Kensington took as little as 10 per cent, certainly no higher than 20.

What Bridgeville took, what Aspinwall took before District Attorney Park closed the betting windows, we don't know, sharp as is our curiosity. The Aspinwall track, incidentally is burdened by sharp turns, where many races were won or lost. This isn't conducive to fast racing.

A Pittsburgh bank recently received a letter from an ingenious gentleman at Monte Carlo. This writer said that a wealthy Pittsburgh woman, member of an old family, whose estate was handled by this bank, had already lost $350,000 at roulette. These losses grieved him, the gentleman said, although he did not know the lady, and he was prepared to recoup her losses. For $10,000 he would give the lady a system which could not fail to win. Would the bank please send him $10,000? The nasty old bank would not send the money and now the foreigner has a poor opinion of us mercenary Americans.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 15

If you think the Senate ain't funny get this Norris resolution, "If there has been any trickery about this London treaty, and we find it out, no matter how old we are, we want to recall back our signatures and call the treaty null and void.

Now we don't know that there has been any trickery, (that's what's worrying us) but if there has, in order that we (the Senators) may have an alibi in case the whole thing don't turn out so good. But in case it is found that we have tricked the other nations, and that the treaty is a fine thing, why this clause don't hold.

Respectfully yours,

EXPERTS WOULD HAVE DRIVERS VIEW VICTIMS

Eliminate 'Fixers,' Educate People on Streets Urged After Hearing 50 Cases

Lewis W. McIntyre, the city's new traffic engineer, and Frank Duggan, chairman of the Better Traffic Committee, sat on the Traffic Court bench today along with Magistrate William J. Soost, the better to promote harmony among their forces in the traffic crusade.

After conferring with Soost McIntyre said:

"Magistrate Soost is doing a good job of it, but the main work lies in the streets, in educating the people to obey the laws, in eliminating the friend who 'fixes' things."

Dugan added:

"A reckless driver or drunken driver who kills a child should be taken to the morgue or the victim's home and made to view the remains."

50 CASES HEARD

McIntyre and Duggan heard Magistrate Soost try 50 motorists, 15 of whom were fined.

Jay-walking pedestrians and persons over 55 years of age are becoming increasingly involved in traffic accidents and present the most serious traffic fatality problems, McIntyre reports in his semi-annual accident analysis for the Better Traffic Committee. The report was attached to the June analysis and shows 15 traffic fatalities during June and 93 during the first six months of 1930.

Nine out of town motorists, two hit and run drivers and four female operators were among the drivers involved in traffic fatalities during last month, the report says. A corresponding increase in jaywalking fatalities was registered over the first six months of last year.

CITES BY-PASS HERE

During the first six months of this year, 49 out of the 67 pedestrians killed were jay-walkers. Last year 36 out of 46 pedestrians killed were jay-walkers.

Through the distribution of copies of the Tourist and Route Guide of Pittsburgh, compiled by the Bureau of Traffic Planning, a means has been developed to combat the effects of anti-Pittsburgh propaganda, McIntyre believes. Tourists, if they desire, can by-pass the downtown district, McIntyre explained in a letter to chambers of commerce throughout the United States.

THREE RESCUED FROM BLAZE BY OFFICER

Child, 3, Tossed From Second Floor Window Caught in Arms of Father Below

Three persons, including a policeman, were burned and a half dozen families were routed when fire swept through the shoe repair shop of Paul Alpine, and the fruit store of Michael Iuni, at 32 and 34 Logan street, respectively early today.

Patrolman Stanley Ferjerski carried Mrs. Mary Noble, 43, and her daughter, Mrs. Verlin Miller, 23, and John Henry, 60, all Negroes, from the second-floor home at 30 Logan street, to the street. Mrs. Noble's grandson, Legion Bedford, 3, was tossed out of a window by his father into the arms of Patrolman Ferjerski after the policeman had rescued the three.

In the rescue Mrs. Noble and Henry were slightly burned. Mrs. Noble was taken to Passavant hospital by police. Her condition was not serious. Patrolman Henry Tish suffered slight burns on the right arm when a burning board fell on him.

Battalion Chief Henry P. Schwarz, who estimated the damage at $500, said the blaze started in Alpine's shop and had eaten its way through the roof of the one-story frame structure when the firemen arrived.

A half dozen Negro families residing in adjacent buildings were routed.

Campbell's Bill Calling for Celebration of Historic Event Shelved in Congress

Objection by ultra-dry members of Congress to the use of the word "whisky" in any national memorial has resulted in preventing the government's participation in commemorating President Washington's suppression of the rebellion of 1794, known in history as the "Whisky Insurrection."

A bill introduced by Representative Guy E. Campbell sponsoring Federal activity with the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and local authorities in creating a park on the site of the battle of Whisky Run, it was learned today, was killed in the Committee of Rules of the House. Dry members of the committee, predominating, caused the Campbell bill to be buried. They declared that the reference to "whisky" would not be understood.

BOARD DISAPPOINTED

The action of Congress has left the Historical Commission flabbergasted. Plans had been laid for the creation of a park on part of the Allegheny County Poor Farm near the Bower Hill road, where a sanguinary conflict occurred between the insurrectionists under Maj. William McFarland and guards at the home of Gen. John Neville, internal revenue collector, Maj. McFarland was killed in this fight. It was hoped that the memorial could be dedicated in connection with Washington's two-hundredth birthday anniversary in 1932.

All bills in Congress authorizing Uncle Sam's joining in activities for the commemoration of the deeds of George Washington have had easy sailing, and the passage of the Campbell bill was looked upon as more or less perfunctory. It was regarded that the suppression of the Whisky Rebellion was one of the big acts of Washington's administration, since it has been looked upon as America's first civil war.

NO COMPROMISE

Ultra-dry members of the committee sidetracked the bill and would listen to no compromise, according to word reaching the Historical Commission from Washington. People would not understand the word that stands for strong liquor, dry committeemen said, and refused to heed arguments that every American elementary school history devotes pages to the uprising against the whisky tax.

Since the National Government is out, the Historical Commission is obliged to alter its plans, but it was stated that the state would proceed in working with the local leaders of the movement in upholding the fame of Washington.

MAN SAVES SON WITH BLOOD

Lawrence Farrell, Jr., was reported recovering today in the Homestead Hospital following a blood transfusion given by his father, Councilman Farrell, Sunday.

The transfusion, physicians said, saved the life of the boy, who suffered from stomach ailments. The father resumed his duties as a watchman in a Homestead bank yesterday.

In Cell Too Much, Wife Says, Divorced

Mrs. Alice Fleming, 25, 1232 Stranmore avenue, has a divorce today, granted by Judge George V. Moore after she had testified before him that her husband, Edward Fleming, 26, 413 Lockhart street, had spent much of the time they had been married behind the bars at the workhouse, ending up by marrying another woman for which he was again sent to the workhouse for bigamy.

The couple married December 1, 1926. A few days later the wife testified Fleming was arrested on a charge of larceny. She returned to her parent's home while he served six months in prison. She went back to him after his release, but in March, 1928, learned he had married Mary Noonan. She said the woman herself told her she had married Fleming. He pleaded guilty to bigamy and was sentenced to 12 to 18 months by Judge Harry H. Rowand.

STUDENT WINS KROGER AWARD

Donald L. McCaskey, of Edgewood High School, today has in his vest pocket a check for $400 and college ahead.

He was given the scholarship award of the Kroger Grocery Company yesterday at Carnegie Tech, with Robert B. Leighou, associate director of the summer session, Carnegie Tech, and Walter B. Jones, professor of education at Pitt, presenting the money.

Those getting honorable mention in the award are James F. Bacon, Sidney Dancoff, Albert Deemer, Mabel A. Lackman and Irving J. Weinstein. The scholarship award is an annual event.

Man Hurt in Fall Sues for $30,000

Injuries suffered when a scaffold fell while he was painting the interior of the Immaculate Conception Church, Bloomfield, form the basis of a $30,000 damage suit on file today in Common Pleas Court by Henry F. Fierst against the National Window and Office Cleaning Company. The accident occurred February 11 last when Fierst says the scaffolding broke, due to inferior wood used in its construction. His right foot was broken and he suffered other injuries, he avers.

Mexican Peasant Plows Up Gold On Free Farm

MAGDALENA, Ralisco, Mexico, July 15.—(AP.)—An impoverished peasant named Crescencio Avila, awarded a parcel of land by the Mexican government under the Agrarian laws, ploughed his holdings for the first time today and unearthed a pot of gold.

His find, which was of Spanish gold pieces probably buried long before the advent of the Mexican republic, was valued at $50,000.

3RD WARD VOTE CASE STARTS

A hearing on the Third Ward registration, as requested by Attorney Donald C. Anderson, representing the Allegheny County Bar Association, was to be held by the Pittsburgh Registration Commission in the Court House late today. Sixteen witnesses will be heard.

DECREE SEQUEL TO GYPSY LIFE

"We slept under the stars. First we had nothing to eat but green apples, but later they became ripe and were better."

So testified Mrs. Hattie E. Bishop, 26, of 568 Chicora street, East McKeesport, in telling of her gypsy honeymoon, in her suit for divorce. Judge George V. Moore was impressed, and granted the decree.

She married Miles P. Bishop, Homestead, at Wellsburg, W. Va., February 16, 1923, while both were employed by the Westinghouse Company. They lived at the girl's home for awhile, and then, with the coming of warm weather, her husband took her roaming the country.

She said: "We just went here and there. Part of the time we had no place to sleep and we ate what we could pick off of trees. We often slept under the stars."

When the nights began to grow cool, on September 22, 1923, the husband took her to her parents' home and left her. She said she did not learn for another year that he was in Homestead.

Farmers in Feud Because 'Cow' Damaged Garden

An argument over damage wrought by "Rosie," a cow, in a truck garden resulted in two neighboring farmers of Hays being haled before Magistrate John J. Sweeney in South Side Police Court today.

Andy Watazychyn, owner of "Rosie," contended $10 would cover the loss, but Joseph Wednick, whose garden was trampled, held out for $175, according to the testimony.

Wednick locked his neighbor in Wednick's kitchen for four hours late yesterday, testimony revealed, in an effort to compel him to pay the full price. At the end of that time Wednick offered him a drink, but Watazychyn fled, instead, and summoned police.

Today the owner of the cow testified he had been shot at in fleeing, but Wednick denied this, saying an empty shell found in his shotgun had been discharged on the Fourth of July.

Magistrate Sweeney discharged both after urging them to agree on the damage.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt declared in a Chautauqua speech that the modern American home lacks a vital religion. Do you agree with her?

Miss Washabaugh

MISS RUTH WASHABAUGH, stenographer, Dormont:—Well, not altogether. But religion in the home isn't all it used to be. Homes of today are more devoted to pleasure and amusement than they are concerned with religious matters.

Frank Davis

FRANK DAVIS, store manager, Pittsburgh — I think the only thing that keeps most homes today from having as religious an atmosphere as they might is the fact that members of the family don't overlook petty grievances.

Mrs. Keys

MRS. RUTH KEYS, office manager, North Side — Religion in modern homes is losing its grip. The mother spends her time at the club, the father plays golf, and the children go to the movies. They can't get together long enough to acquire anything like a religious atmosphere.

Robert Calhoun

ROBERT CALHOUN, salesman, Wilkinsburg—Yes, I certainly agree with Mrs. Roosevelt. The modern American home at one time had a vital religion but with the advance in customs and habits it has dwindled away.

Miss Sheckter

MISS PEARL S HECKTER, sales woman, Beechview — I think most people have some religion whether it is evident in the home or not. Everybody believes in something but often they don't admit it or don't live up to their beliefs.

Edward Schwartz

EDWARD SCHWARTZ, assistant store manager, Squirrel Hill—Yes, the modern American home does lack a vital religion. People are in such a hurry to go places and to keep going that they don't bother with anything that has to do with religion.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Pittsburgher Colonies Growing

Social activities have slowed down perceptibly even during the past week, and there seems to be very little going on in the social world except a mere handful of informal dinners, buffet suppers and teas. August and September will, of course, bring a heightening of social activity, but during July I can tell you about no one else but travelers.

There always someone going to summer resorts and various places of interest during this month, and some resorts have colonies of Pittsburgh and Sewickley society folks.

Many people who have been out of town for several weeks are returning to either spend the remainder of the summer here at home or are just returning to spend a few days at home before flitting away again to some new spot of interest. Last evening Dr. and Mrs. Walter A. Dearth of Marlboro street returned from Akron, O. Mrs. Donald Early of Chattanooga, Tenn., and her small daughter, Virginia Alice, is visiting her mother and father, the Marcellus Cole Adamses. Mrs. James W. Arrott, Jr., is planning to go to Las Vegas, N. M., either late this summer or in the early fall. Mrs. James W. Arrott, III, has gone to New York.

Another bit of news that will be of interest to you is that the Stephen Stones and their son, Stephen, Jr., are leaving the first of August for their cottage in Georgian Bay, Canada. And with them will go their daughter, Marian, whose engagement to Edward Purvell Mellon, II, was announced recently, you will recall.

Canada Attracts

Last evening the Bertrand West Lewises of Pacific avenue, accompanied by their daughter, Sara Lewis, and their son, Bertrand West Lewis, Jr., left for Georgian Bay, too.

Anne Douglas Stewart, who's the daughter of Mrs. Douglas Stewart, of Solway street, left with her mother for Hyannisport, to be the guest of Laura Salisbury Evans at her summer home. Later Anne and her mother plan to go to Miami and from there to Hot Springs. They will not return until after Labor Day.

There are several small parties that will be of interest to you, too. On Saturday evening the Frederick F. McIntoshes, of Beaver road, Sewickley, held a novel picnic on the lawn of their home in honor of the Donald M. Simonses, of Glen Osborne, who have but recently returned from New York, where they have been all winter.

CHARMING HATS OF VELVET FAVORED FOR AUTUMN WEAR

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JULY 15. It would seem that our heads are to be in velvet this Autumn. Already there are unmistakable signs that the velvet hat is to head the list and our coiffeurs. This isn't at all surprising for the velvet hat lends itself to soft draping and manipulation, thus resulting in a chapeau that should be absolutely in harmony with the soft silhouette that is now extant and should prevail next season. Over here, there have been some Summer hats of velvet combined with other fabrics, and such hats have been much liked, especially on cool days. Felt is making its presence felt again and we noted several lovely models of fine felt at various out-door events, including of course the races, those delightful events that play such a tremendous part in the season here. The large hat of felt somehow seems particularly appropriate for wear at the race track, and is often the choice of women who have a far-reaching influence on the mode.

BOTH OF THE hats sketched today are very new, very chic and very different. The first is a smart all-felt hat and was sketched last week at the Chantilly races, where it was worn by an exceedingly well-dressed young woman. It was in almond green with a wide, drooping brim and two shirred motifs of matching felt as trimming, one on the side of the brim and one across the back of the crown.

THE OTHER SKETCH is of a hat from Madame Jose. It is of black velvet bordered with black crin or horsehair, a good looking combination. The brim narrows over one eye, and is caught up beneath a crisp bow of the crin. This, as you may see, is a very distinctive hat and one that may be worn for a variety of different occasions, a characteristic that unfortunately cannot be attributed to many hats. Madame Jose counts this as one of her smartest and happiest creations.

The Low Cost of Health

Some people spend a lot of money for Health and don't get it. No matter how much you spend for it, health will not come with wrong food habits. A bowl of Shredded Wheat and milk for breakfast every morning will go a long way toward repairing the damage done by foolish food habits. A simple, nourishing food that contains every element the body needs—and so easily digested.

Hands of a clerk's wife . . equally lovely

$20,000 a year . . $2,000 a year

Hands equally lovely!

Now wives who do all their own work have hands lovely as women with maids . . . thanks to Lux

Almost anywhere they may meet . . .

The woman of wealth—with maids at her call—the young wife who is homemaker—cook—dishwasher, too. Notice this amazing TRUE fact—

You can't tell, from their hands, which is which!

Everywhere wives are achieving this triumph . . . doing all the many tasks of a home . . . yet keeping their HANDS so EXQUISITE, so white—you'd think they never touched housework.

Women discovered the secret themselves. Washing fine things in Lux, they noticed how nice their hands looked afterward. Then began using Lux for dishes. For cleaning. Whenever their hands touched soap and water!

Almost AT ONCE their hands showed the difference . . . became lovelier . . . SMOOTH, WHITE, like a GIRL'S!

So wonderful is Lux for the hands that beauty experts—with all their experience—say, "We can't distinguish between the hands of a woman with maids and the hands of the housewife who uses Lux."

Why is Lux so fine for the hands? The reason is this. Many soaps contain harmful alkali that dries up the oils of the skin, the oils that nature placed there to keep the skin smooth and white.

Lux never dries these delicate oils. Those sparkling Lux suds in your dishpan are soothing and very bland.

Why not try Lux for YOUR dishes—it costs less than 1¢ a day!

HOOVER CUTS TOUR PLANS

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—President Hoover has decided definitely to make his trip to the West this summer unless unforeseen circumstances develop.

He hopes to be able to leave soon after the Senate adjourns.

The trip will be considerably curtailed, however, from the extensive swing planned originally, which would have taken him into six national parks in the Rocky Mountains and to his home at Palo Alto, Cal.

He has excluded from the itinerary now under consideration California, Oregon, Washington and, probably, Colorado.

When he first announced his plans, he expected to leave the latter part of this month and spend about five weeks traveling by automobile and train, but prolongation of the Senate's session forced curtailment.

FIND MISSING LINK OF HORSE

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Fossil bones of the connecting link between the present horse and his late three-toed ancestor have been found in Idaho by scientists of Smithsonian Institution.

Dr. J. W. Gidley, mammalogist of the institution, in announcing the discovery, said this new extinct species, which stood just behind the living horse, was a very valuable contribution in tracing the evolution of that animal.

With the finding of these skeletal remains, he said there was no major missing link in the anatomical evolution of the horse as far back as 25,000,000 years. Only two gaps, which lie beyond that period, remain to be bridged, he said, to have a complete evolution history of the animal which was once no larger than the fox.

Puts Automatic Gas Heat in your coal Furnace Now

Any good coal furnace whether used for warm air heating or for steam, hot water or vapor heating can be converted to an automatic gas heating plant by the Surface Combustion Gas Burner. You and your family can enjoy the cleanliness, the even temperature comfort and the freedom from furnace coddling that gas heat brings, with practically no outlay of cash . . . as little as $5 down payment will do. . . and no more until October.

10% Off for July Orders

If you will help us get a pre-season start on installations by placing your order during July you will save 10% on the completely installed price of $185. Your burner will cost only $166.50 . . . and you have 24 months to pay for it. Your savings in doctor bills, wall paper, cleaning bills for draperies, rugs and furniture, cost of removing ashes, and furnace cleaning and repairs probably will offset the complete cost of the equipment during the time you are paying for it. Remember, this gas burner makes an automatic gas heating plant out of your present coal furnace.

Only $1 Monthly in Winter

To make it still easier for our consumers to enjoy the many advantages of gas heat your monthly payments will be reduced to only $1 during the months of December, January and February. There really isn't any obstacle left to prevent anyone from having this cleanest and most healthful form of heat . . . you have practically no initial investment, no payments until fall, only $1 during cold months and 24 months to take care of the balance.

And as for heating costs, you'll find them very reasonable. No gas is wasted at any time. Enough and only enough is used to keep your home at the temperature you choose. Further, you don't pay for the gas until the month after you have used it. You never have any money tied up in fuel.

ASK FOR A FREE ESTIMATE

You can know now just about what it will cost to heat your home in the ideal way, automatically with gas. If you will telephone the Gas Office or send the coupon we will have a heating man work up an estimate on the cost of fuel for a season's heating. No obligation, whatever. But better act now while there still is time to save that 10% for orders placed in July.

BOBBY JONES MRS MOODY GALLANT FOX JACK SHARKEY

WHAT IS THE truest measure of greatness?

If that question were propounded to you, what would be your answer?

Our reply is consistency.

It is consistency that makes Bobby Jones the world's greatest golfer, amateur or professional.

It is consistency that makes Gallant Fox the greatest three-year old of the racing turf.

It was consistency that made Bill Tilden the foremost tennis player in the world.

Consistency is the keynote of the success of Mrs. Helen Wills Moody on the courts.

Lack of consistency has kept Jack Sharkey, the greatest heavyweight in boxing since the retirement of Gene Tunney, from becoming champion, just as consistency made Tunney an outstanding performer.

IT TAKES EITHER a brave man or a brash one to criticize another who has attained the heights and is at the moment a public idol.

Such criticism generally rebounds with boomerang effect upon the critic.

ALL OF WHICH is preliminary to the observations of Gene Sarazan, former open champion, on the latest victory of Bobby Jones in this year's national open at Interlachen. At the moment of Bobby's great personal triumph and glory, Sarazen, writing for the newspapers, says:

"I doff my hat readily to the master golfer of all time—Bobby Jones.

"There's no longer any doubt about the Georgian's standing in bunkerland. His victory at Interlachen was the greatest of his career. He has won three major championships within a space of three months and you can bet all the chili in Mexico that he'll win the amateur title at Merion in September. What he does after that hardly will matter. Jones will have established a record that no other man in any land ever even has approached.

"BUT I AM sorry that his victory, great as it was, should be tainted by the decision made by the United States Golf Association in Jones' favor on the seventeenth hole. It seems to me that Jones, who in the eyes of the public is a good sport, should have gone back to the tee and made another drive. There is no doubt in the minds of many who witnessed the unfortunate incident that the ball was lost.

"The ball in its mad flight from the tee tore through the trees and disappeared. Nobody saw where it dropped. It was presumed that it went into the swamps land that was ruled to be a parallel with another hazard.

"Rules of golf weren't made to be interpreted on presumption.

"It was just another of those regrettable incidents that have slightly tarnished the record of Bobby.

"IF HE CONTINUES to play competitive golf, Jones probably will continue to win. He has the professionals stymied. The great crowds that follow him are a distinct advantage for several reasons. They disconcert his rivals. Every time they cheer some feat of Bobby's, injury is done to somebody who is about to execute a stroke. His very popularity forces the United States Golf Association to give him favorable starting times. All these things hurt the professionals psychologically. But they apparently can't be helped.

"I say again, hats off to Bobby; he's the world's greatest com-

PUBLIC PARKS PLAY OPENS WITH BANG

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Municipal net hosts braved breezes reminiscent of autumn yesterday and swept in gala array into action on the rectangles of Schenley, Olympia, Highland, Riverview, Frick and West Parks to inaugurate hostilities in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph revival of the Pittsburgh Public Parks tennis championships. Despite weather conditions far from ideal for the pastime, contestants hurled themselves enthusiastically into the milling and before bleak twilight had deepened into night 43 verdicts had been attained and a raft of clever and spirited racqueting had been flashed before ample and interested galleries.

PLAY MOVES FAST

Committeeman Irving Goodman kept matters moving at swift pace in both men's and women's divisions upon the Schenley lot with the result that but a dozen initial round man-to-man tussles remain for completion, while just two more feminine tussles need be reeled off to fill out the bracket of eight. Favorites battled through the men's jousting with varying degrees of difficulty, but with uniform success Goodman and Blumberger, Pitt luminaries, seeded one-two, were not called upon to combat, but Zola Alpert and Sammy Braemer, likewise Panthers

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE INDIAN SADHU WHO WALKS KNEELING DOWN—While in India, several years ago, I saw and sketched this curious individual. He is another example of the devoted religious ascetics of that country who believe in self-infliction of body punishment and torture. ICE WORMS LIVE IN GLACIER ICE AND SNOW—These worms are the sole inhabitants of some parts of the Arctic and Antarctic regions. They also are found in the glaciers of the temperate zones. The examples illustrated were sent to me by the Chamber of Commerce at Hoquiam, Wash. They were taken from the north glacier on Mount Christy in the Olympic National Forest, near that city. Prof. Trevor Kinkaid, of the Department of Biology at the University of Washington, states that these creatures are equipped with a pigment by nature that allows them to draw heat from the light of the moon.

BRAME LIKELY TO OPPOSE ROBINS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 15.—While there were many regrets in the Pirate camp today over the failure of the Bucco to take the measure of Dazzy Vance yesterday, Manager Ens and his charges were chiefly concerned with the idea of taking the rubber game of the series which is scheduled for this afternoon.

The Vance complex passed, the Buccos expected to look at the servings of Ray Moss or Ray Phelps, both of whom are right-handers. Uncle Robbie, however, hinted to this writer that he might switch to Adolf Luque or Watson Clarke. Robbie has so many pitchers ready, his main problem is to select the right sharp shooter. Skipper Ens, on the other hand, has only two pitchers available. Either Ervin Brame or Heine Meine will fling for the Pittsburghers, the odds favoring the tall Kentuckian. Meine has been unable to do much for his club this year, owing to a stubborn spell of sickness.

BOSTON NEXT

The Buccos will head for Boston late tonight. They will jump off at the Hub tomorrow with a double header, single games with the Tribe being scheduled for the remaining days of the week.

Paul Waner's status today was somewhat indefinite. The star batsman was out yesterday, owing to a stomach attack, the cause of

ELDRED, LUTHER DEADLOCKED FOR SECOND

BULLETIN.

P. O. Hart, of Canton, former Wheeling pro, scored a 70 for his last round in the 72-hole Pennsylvania Open Golf tourney at the Allegheny Country Club this afternoon for a total of 294 to take an early lead for titular honors.

By VERNON SWARTSFAGER

Ed Dudley, of the Concord Country Club, Wilmington, Del., gained the lead in defense of his Pennsylvania Open championship at the Allegheny Country Club with half of the field having completed 54 holes of the 72-hole medal test today when he scored a brilliant par 70 for a total of 217 to lead his nearest competitors, Ted Luther, of Corry, Pa., and Vincent Eldred, of Highland Western Pennsylvania Open champion and yesterday's medalist by two strokes. Luther returned a fine 70 this morning and Eldred needed 73 for their tallies of 219.

P. O. Hart, of Canton, former Wheeling instructor who played in the National Open last week, and Walter Johnstone, pro at the Butler Country Club, were tied for next position at 224, the Butler member of the paid brigade having one of the low scores of the third round with a one-more-than-par 71.

BARONI AMONG LEADERS

Handsome Fred Baroni, Stanton Heights star who in years past held the west Pennsylvania Open crown twice consecutively, was right up among the leaders with a total of 225, by virture of his third round 76.

George Underwood, of Aleoma, whose 72 led the inaugural round of play, took a 76 to rate 226 and a deadlock with Dave McKay, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, and Peter O'Hara, of Westmoreland, who was tied for second place at the end of 36 holes. O'Hara was playing good golf, but his card mounted to a 79 before he went to lunch.

Leo Shea, of Wheeling, remained in the running for the money by registering a 76 today for 229. Greer McIlvain, Oakmont star and holder of the Pennsylvania Amateur title, put himself out of the serious running by carding a 78, which brought his total to 232.

MANNING CARDS 229

Charley Manning, of Shannopin, came through with 76 for a 54-hole card of 229, while Emil (Dutch) Loeffler, Oakmont pro greenkeeper, had 74 for a 226 total.

Herbert P. Miller, Jr., Edgewood champion, who led the amateurs in the first round yesterday with a 74 and then ran up an 87 to almost put himself out of the running, was playing better this morning and scored a 77 to bring his total for the three rounds to 238.

Some of the finest golf produced in the tourney was exhibited by Ted Luther, the Corry pro, in going out this morning in three strokes under par for a 32, he having four 3s and five 4s on his card. A 6 on the par 5 thirteenth broke his incoming score to give him 39.

Ed Dudley, in rating his par 70 to take the lead for the three rounds, played a fine consistent game fairly even with the Old Man as his card indicated.

EBBETS TOPS PALMER

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP.)—Harry Ebbets, New York middleweight, battered out a 10-round decision over Nick Palmer, ace of New York, in a spectacular slugging match at Dexter Park last night. Ebbets weighed 162½; Palmer 160.

COURTNEY VICTOR

NEWARK, N. J., July 14.—(AP.)—George Courtney, 166, Oklahoma middleweight, won a 10-round decision over Vincent Forgione, 165, of Philadelphia, here last night.

RUMANIA WINS

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, JULY 15.—(AP.)—Rumania defeated Peru, 3 to 1, and Jugoslavia beat Brazil, 2-1, in the world soccer championship yesterday.

Nick Altrock Says:

DETROIT, July 15.—All I can say is I am thankful we don't have to beat out Bobby Jones to win a pennant. I see they gave Bobby a day in Atlanta. I guess the rest of those golfers wish they would give him six years.

Nick Altrock

The way the pennant race is going, I have bitten my fingernails down to the quick. I will have to grow more margin to bite on or else start gnawing my knuckles if the A's and our club don't separate a bit.

Over in the National loop I am beginning to think that Brooklyn cops the flag. That makes Wilbert Robinson the only miracle man that ever had size 17½ neck.

and respectively third and fourth in the rating, skipped through neatly, the former out-hitting Jim Conway, 6-1, 6-2, and the latter proving too cagy for Tom Murphy, 6-0, 6-1.

Harry Wald, another accomplished Pitt entry, encountered a mighty tough one in Coburn Sweet, former Dickinson varsity performer, but boasted the goods to fight through at 6-4, 5-7, 6-1. Wald's younger brother, Leon, also emerged on top in a protracted struggle, his victim being Alvin Silverman and the tally reading 4-6, 10-8, 6-3. Additional marathons found J. M. Kane downing H. P. Malasky 6-1, 1-6, 6-3, and Irving Pearlstone accounting for Bernard Grossman, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

UPSET MARKS PLAY

Real upset featured the women's card when Letitia Schmidt, Carrick girl, overwhelmed Eleanor Lemon, seeded second, 6-0, 6-3. Jeannette Miller, seeded number one, eased ahead on a bye, while Flo Schneider, number three, and Marion Klein, number four, skirmished forward in straight, though well argued, sets.

Extra-frame affairs seemed the order of the occasion in Bill Creighton's Olympia realm. Joe O'Neill, Duke satellite, opened the program by pulling out a 3-6, 6-4, 7-5 decision over Manuel Bruder, while Rodney Snodgrass turned in a similar feat by bumping Jack Rosen, former junior contender, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, and Bob Broad overcame early disadvantage to eliminate E. W. Eichorn, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. P. L. Cope, displaying accurate chop, reversed the dope at the expense of Ralph Snively, 6-3, 6-3, to add further spirit to chapter one.

Frank Schwab, Leo O'Neill and little Eddie Ferrick led the procession into round three, Schwab drove nicely to trim Bill Vaughan, 6-3, 6-1, and O'Neill's experience was a bit too much for youthful Regis Scanlon, of Crafton Heights, 6-2, 6-0, with Perrick advancing by default of Elmer Artzberger.

LINK PUTS OUT BLATT

Out at Highland, Jake Olko pushed his proteges along merrily to wind up round one, save for two delinquent fracases. H. C. Link, second seeded entrant and runner-up to the Pittsburgh Center boys' title in 1929, carried too many guns at the net for diminutive Laurent Blatt, who exhibited pretty strokes, but lacked the steam that goes with pounds and inches. The result was 6-0, 6-2. Bill Purcell, Duke Prepper seeded fourth, met with sturdy opposition from the stinging drives of Saul Weisberg, but parked the steadiness to cop at 3-6, 6-3, 8-6. Dr. James H. Spencer looms as a lower-bracket darkhorse by virtue of powerful walloping to overwhelm Oscar Spirer, 6-1, 6-2, and H. A. Hicks was by no means unimpressive in thumping Al Goldblum with loss of but one game. Erwin Beck slipped handily into the third round with love-set victory over Edgar Topp.

Short programs were on tap at Riverview, Frick and West, where entry lists are less extensive than in the other trio of parks. Bob Meyer, Riverview's second seeded star, justified his rating by taking over Richard Young in fancy fashion, 6-0, 6-1. Meyer's consistent slicing style shifted the burden of attack to Young, who was unable to assume the aggressive effectively enough to cause his rival excessive worry. Meanwhile in the same area Bob McClurkin and Howard Kleeb registered triumphs in consecutive sets over Jack Feldheimer and Fred Strothman respectively. Jack Herrmann, czar of the seeded group, will not cavort till this evening, when he will mingle with Bob Callen, who should provide adequate test for his skill.

TUFFY M'MILLIN WINS

Blair McMillin, better known to Pittsburghers as Tuffy, of Pitt gridiron fame, grabbed early Frick laurels with 6-3, 6-3 success over Louis Berndle and thereby moved on to the quarter-final notch, wherein he was joined by Joe Rosenbloom, who clicked off J. F. O'Connor—not, of course, the redoubtable Jimmy, of Duquesne University and West Penn tournament distinction—, 6-2, 6-1.

In the lone West Park fray of the evening, Ralph Beilstein stepped from his committeeman's role long enough to administer 6-4, 6-2 reversal to John McDonald. Beilstein and his brother Karl, both seeded, are thus in the Lower North Side semi-finals, Karl having profited by the only bye in the abbreviated West draw.

This afternoon and evening will behold heavy activity in the men's event. All first round melees must be cleaned up before sundown and it is further hoped to go a long way toward knocking off the second frame. Players who have not reported to their committeemen for inaugural round matches by 6 o'clock will perforce be automatically defaulted. Women's competition will be resumed at Schenley with first and second round engagements and fair aspirants to laurels will also see action at Frick, West and Olympia according to official schedule. Goslin Suffers Appendicitis Attack

ST. LOUIS, July 15.—(AP.)—George Goslin, St. Louis Browns' hitting ace and star outfielder, will be missing from the lineup for several days at least as result of an attack of appendicitis which sent him to a hospital yesterday. Dr. Robert F. Hyland, club surgeon, said Goslin was in no immediate danger and an operation probably would "not be necessary."

BOSTON, July 15.—(AP.)—The Chicago Cubs will file an official protest of the second game of Sunday's double header with the Boston Braves here, Manager Joe McCarthy said last night.

"The game was stopped in the ninth inning, at 6 o'clock, to conform with Massachusetts' Sunday sports law, and the score reverted to what it was at the end of the eighth, giving the Braves a 3-to-0 victory.

The Cubs scored four runs in their half of the ninth, and they claimed the Braves were stalling in the second half of the inning. McCarthy said also that the umpires had promised that the game would be finished "even if they had to play until 7 o'clock."

DATTO STOPS GERSHE

CLEVELAND, July 15.—Three rights landed on Benny Gershe's jaw and the fight for the featherweight championship of Ohio was over in the first round here last night. Johnny Datto, Filipino slugger, winning on a knockout. A right sent Datto to the ropes, where Gershe punished him with lefts to the body. Datto suddenly whipped a right to the jaw that staggered Gershe, and followed with two more that sent the Jewish boxer to the canvas, where he was counted out.

Bob Moody, Pittsburgh heavyweight, was declared the victor over Tut Jackson, Washington Court House, in the fifth stanza of a scheduled six-round semi-final bout when the referee stopped the bout, contending that Jackson was not fighting.

Three big games in the Central League top the local sandlot card this evening. Allegheny Collegians, first-half champion, will open their second-half fight at Dean Field, meeting the Jimmy Coslett Club.

Beckman Mixers and the Fintex nine will stage the battle of the South Hills at Washington Park and see if that Fintex was nosed out in the final game of the half. It is expected that Pickles and his club will be in their fighting hard.

The third game finds Y. M. H. A. hooking up with the Lincoln Civics at Hartman Park. The Civics made a great showing in the early part of the first-half race and will be tough to beat.

Whitaker goes to North Bessemer in the West Penn loop and this should be a close game. In the Commercial and Industrial loop Mine Safety Appliance makes the trip to B. & O. Para to meet the B. & O. team. Gettings might get the assignment opposing the railroad aces.

DOELFELS IN FIRST

In the Steel City League the H. L. Doelfels make their first appearance in the loop by entertaining the East End Cardinals at Magee Field. These clubs have established a reputation of being two of the best light first-class clubs in the district and Doelfels should go big in this circuit.

Demor will meet its rival from Perrysville a time this evening when Meeder takes the Observatory Civics to the Frazier street grounds. These teams met in the first-half playoffs in a good game and should be on par.

In the City League Homewood goes to Dormont as H. L. Thomas meets the North Side Civics at the Belt Works grounds, and Book Shoe travels to Pleasant Valley to meet Dunkirk's club.

Due to the inability of the players to report for scheduled league games, the Universal team of the West Penn and Greater Pittsburgh leagues were forced to abandon the loops.

Manager Max Kumer of the Universal Club decided to break up the club after several of his regular players failed to make an appearance for their league tussle with Whitaker last night.

GRAYS MEET STOWE

Book Shoe came through in the City League yesterday to nose out W. O. W. 6 to 5 while Whitaker took over Universal 9 to 8 in the West Penn. Ingram copped its Crafton Church League tilt by tapping the Methodists 9 to 3 and Reliance won in the Greater Pittsburgh loop by setting down Stephens 4 to 3. National Union copped in the Commercial league, giving McCreery's 9-7, and Colter beat Brighton 3-0 in the Metropolitan.

Duquesne Traders topped the Homestead Aces 7-5. Homewood won from Pitcairn P. R. R. 6-0 and Iroquois beat Thomas Run 9-2 in independent tilts.

The Duquesne Traders are open for games with any club in the Monongahela Valley, Beaver Valley, West Penn or Greater Pittsburgh leagues. Call Tom Martin, Homestead 0976-R or write him at 242 Eighteenth avenue, Homestead.

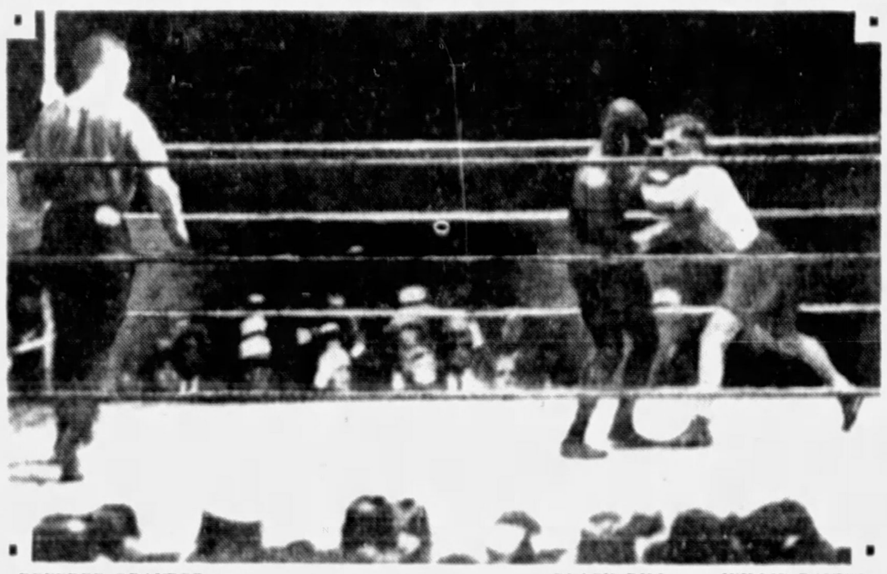
HIGH SPOTS OF BOWL BOUTS



REFEREE GRAYBER — BLACK BILL — WILLIE DAVIES

REFEREE HENDERSON — HARRY HARRIS — NICK POLIS

Polis floored for the first time in the seventh round of the semi-final at the Bowl. He got up groggy and defenseless to be needlessly dropped again and his seconds threw in the towel for him at the count of seven.

BUCS AFTER RUBBER GAME

which was some bad food. Jimmy Mosolf took his place yesterday, and the Big Moose didn't weaken the Pirates one iota. In fact, Jim was a big offensive star as the Pirates all but overpowered ol' Dazmarine.

In the closing innings of yesterday's fight the Freebooters had the big blond on the ropes and Uncle Robbie had the towel ready. There was activity in the bullpen as Gus Suhr hoisted a foul to Wallie Gilbert for the last putout of the game. The Brooklyn victory carried a 12 to 8 count.

Vance blanked the Buccos on one infield hit through four rounds but Pie Traynor reached him for an over-the-fence homer at the outset of the fifth and from that point to the finish Dazzy was afflicted with staggeritis. Meanwhile however his mates had acquired a big lead and Vance's collapse may have been brought about by his tendency to ease up. In the last four frames the Pittsburgh batters nicked him for a dozen safeties and seven runs.

SPENCER POUNDED

Manager Ens thought Glenn Spencer fresh from his two-hit exploit in St. Louis would be able to hold the Robins in check, but Glenn was given a hard shellacking as was Parson Lang who followed him to the mound.

The principal bone of contention for the Pirates was one of their former buddies the popular Forest Glenn Wright, who once again is regarded as one of the great performers of the diamond. Wright led the offensive of the home club with two homers and two singles. His four-sackers are counted for five runs and neither of his singles was wasted. In all the spread eagle star drove in seven tallies and his work around the short field was right up to his best form.

Had Wright been missing from the fray the Buccos stood to take the measure of the Flatbush crew. Both of his four-sackers cleared the right field wall and each of his singles had a ring to it. Glenn is back in the form he displayed so long for the Pirates. He has climbed into the .300 class of hitters and Wright at .300 is more valuable to a club than a lot of baseball boys who aim for .400 and who are lacking in team play qualities.

BOONE JOINS ROBINS

Ike Boone, late of the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League, took his place in the Robin lineup and in his first time at bat the giant delivered a ripping three-bagger that had much to do with the ultimate victory. The work was the pivotal drive in a four-run outbreak there being two Robins on the paths at the time.

Wright's first homer came in the third and increased the lead of his team to six tallies. Traynor nicked Ol' Daz for a four-sacker in the fifth and then the Pirates began to work on Vance. Adam Comorosky made three hits in succession with others in the lineup lining in with solid smashes. Mosolf's big day included two clean hits and a pair of passes.

The Robins added two more runs in the fifth and Spencer came out for pinch-hitter Dick Bartell. This move gave Martin Lang a chance to show his stuff but the new left-hander was given an awful greeting. After two were out the home batters jumped on him for four tallies, Wright's second homer accounting for three of the runs.

Brickell batted for Lang in the seventh and Leon Chagnon held the foe runless for the remainder of the game. But the damage had been done.

KECK'S SPORT COMMENT

petitor. He has won 12 major championships, a record. He has been the first to win two opens consecutively since the heydays of Willie McDermott in 1911 and 1912. He is the first to win three major championships in one season."

A SOUR NOTE from one of the paid brigade of golfdom, you say? Perhaps. But at the same time it must be recognized that Gene speaks a truth when he stresses the effect on the pros of Jones' great popularity among followers of the game. This is not to Jones' discredit, and although it could come with better grace from an outsider, yet while one may scoff at Gene's lack of tact in intruding on Jones' hour of glory at its peak, at the same time he must be credited with courage in speaking his thoughts. Others have hinted at the situation, but none have come out in the open and given such frank expression to the pet peeve of the average top-ranking professional.

OUR PIRATES, NOW in the East, where they hope to make up lost ground with their casualties back in the lineup, are fighting an almost hopeless cause for this season at least, but any observer who is honest with himself will be slow to lay the blame for the collapse of the team's fortunes at the door of the management. Seldom has any contender been beset with injuries and illness to such an alarming degree as the local club in any one season. Manager Jewel Ens has made the best of a bad mess and through it all has carried his head high. The success or failure of his first full season as manager must be based on what he does from this point on rather than on what has occurred up to this stage.

SPEAKING OF THE National League pennant race, there really is nothing very remarkable about the continued drive of the Brooklyn Robins, who have been a surprise from the clang of the gong. Nothing succeeds like success is an old axiom, and its truth is aptly illustrated by what the Robins have accomplished and still are accomplishing. The greatest factor in any winning fight is the impetus that pushes along the contender. Gathered momentum is hard to stop.

The Robins have come to believe in themselves and confidence is a great item in any competitive form. In this instance, it represents the motive power of Uncle Robbie's club.

BILL TILDEN WILL not be a member of the United States Davis Cup team in the final round of the effort to regain this emblem of world tennis team supremacy from France, it is announced. Tilden would prove a potent member of the team, especially in view of the 37-year-old star's splendid comeback at Wimbledon. However, with Wilmer Allison, his victim in the final at Wimbledon after the Texan had accomplished the defeat of Henri Cochet, of France, to lead the singles fight, the United States will be well represented and, whether we win or lose, this country is steaming along well in its campaign to develop a team of youngsters to carry on the gauge of battle in the years to come. The great figure of Tilden loomed huge in the present emergency, but there are other seasons ahead when he will not be available, and it is just as well to have an eye on the future.

BOXING PROMOTERS ARE looking askance at the invasion of night baseball on their time. Locally, the promoters have suffered heavily at the hands of dog-racing, and, with night baseball now coming into its own in these parts, they see further trouble just around the corner. The Homestead Grays play the first night game in Pittsburgh against the Kansas City Monarchs, another Negro team, at Forbes Field next Friday night.

YESTERDAY THE Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph inaugurated a fixture that should meet with the approval and high indorsement of all lovers of amateur athletics, its first annual public parks championship tennis tournament, corresponding with the public links golf championship. Play is on the courts of six public parks. Within the week the champions of these parks in men's and women's singles will be decided and the winners then will meet in inter-park finals. The city champions thus will be determined, and they will be handsomely rewarded with prizes and a trip to Washington for the national public parks championships next month.

Members of club teams are not eligible to compete. In other words, this tournament is one for the "common people" of tennis, a group too long ignored.

DAVIES RALLIES AGAIN TO TOP BLACK BILL

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

History repeated in the Meyers Bowl ring, North Braddock, last night when Willie Davies, star flyweight, of Charleroi, again came from behind to defeat Black Bill, the Cuban whom he was meeting for the sixth time, in a slashing 10-round battle that tickled the fans even more than their recent fifth clash in the same ring.

One of the biggest fighting hearts ever placed in the body of a small man enabled Davies to come from a mile behind to a goodly distance in front in this tussle. Almost from the start he fought under the handicap of a bad cut over his left eye that kept trickling blood into that optic and blurring his vision, yet he never quit, bearing down and outthought, outboxed, outfought and outgamed his dusky foe to such an extent that he had the fans up cheering round after round. At the finish, they gave him a well deserved ovation.

BILL FIGHTS STUPIDLY

Contrasted with Davies' brilliant campaign was a stupid exhibition by Black Bill. Once more that worthy got off to a great start only to lose his advantage as he stood stolidly round after round and let Davies jab him off balance and then outfight him in the clinches. All of the cajoling and threatening of his seconds could not get Bill to resume the offensive—in short, it was the fifth Davies-Black Bill fight all over again, only more so if possible. In that fifth battle, Black Bill carried the first three rounds and then slowed down to a walk under Davies' heady boxing.

They started off by working into a clinch last night, and Bill blazed away with his free right arm. Coming out of the clinch, he clipped Davies a peach of a right over the left eye, and the cut opened on Willie's forehead to trouble him over the remainder of the route. The blow also dazed Willie and made him break ground and hold on in a few clinches that followed. Midway in the round Davies began to regain his balance and stabbed his way out of danger, but Bill was banging him with the right again at the bell. It was a stormy session for Willie, and for a time it appeared as if he might prove a knockout victim.

TIDE TURNS IN THIRD

Black Bill continued to outpunch Davies in the second round, while blood from the cut smeared Willie's face in gruesome fashion.

Then the tide turned. Willie took command of the situation with his boxing in the third round and kept his opponent off balance and muffled his punch right down to the finish except for the seventh round, in which Bill once more cut loose with a series of rights that had Davies in trouble. It was the Cuban's only round, however, save for the first two, and the decision of the judges and the referee in Davies' favor was unanimous and cheered to the echo by the fans.

In their six meetings, all good fights, Black Bill has won only one bout, the fourth, in the New York elimination tournament. Davies won the first, in Philadelphia, the next two were draws, in Havana, Cuba, and the fifth and sixth, at the Meyers Bowl, went to Davies.

Willie was heavy at 114 pounds last night against Black Bill's 113¼.

HARRIS STOPS POLIS

Harry Harris, 164¾, the Gene Tunney of Bellaire, O., scored another hit with the crowd in battering Nick Polis, of Aliquippa, 160¼, into a technical knockout defeat in seven rounds in the scheduled eight-round semi-final. Polis, who knocked out Harry Spencer in three rounds at Washington, Pa., last week, was no match for the cool sharpshooter from Ohio, who recently defeated Harry Williams in the Bowl, and absorbed a bad systematic beating up to the time he went down under a series of straight right hand smashes to the head and jaw in the seventh round. Taking a count of nine holding onto the middle rope, he was defenseless when he arose and reeled back against the ropes on another side of the ring with his hands at his sides.

The bout should have been stopped at this stage, but the referee did not act and Harris had to send over another needless and cruel right that toppled Polis pitifully to the floor. Still the referee did not stop the slaughter, but began to count out Nick. At seven a towel fluttered from Polis' corner to rob Harris of credit for a real knockout when the referee halted his count at the signal. Polis was in bad shape and had to spend some time in his corner before he was able to leave the ring. He was lucky he was not killed by the final blow that never should have been permitted to reach his limp and defenseless person.

PEREZ KNOCKED OUT

Teddy Perez, Mexican 148-pounder, was no match for Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, 144½, and was floored and finished in one round of fighting in the second bout. DeLuca's first right hand punch knocked one of Perez's teeth through his lip and severed a blood vessel and he bled so badly and tottered so uncertainly as the bell finished the round that the referee wisely refused to permit him to come up for the second round.

Jackie Ward, of Cleveland, 120, defeated Jackie Wilson, Negro, of Homewood, 117, in the first bout, a clownish affair that pleased the fans.

Al Grayber refereed the main and second bouts and Jack Henderson the other two. They alternated as judges with Freddie Lux, of McKeesport. A. C. Couch and Max Zeugschmidt were the timers and Ray Eberle did the announcing. The bell was so faint that it scarcely could be heard and a new one will have to be installed if confusion is to be prevented in the future. Black Bill had to be ordered to his corner at the end of nearly every round when he failed to detect its dead sound.

STOGIES COP FIRST NIGHT GAME

WHEELING, W. Va., July 15.—The Charleroi Governors went down to defeat, 8 to 2, at the hands of the Wheeling Stogies in the first night game played in the Mid-Atlantic circuit here last night. A record crowd of 4,000 attended with Honus Wagner, former Pirate star, one of the guests of honor.

RODGERS, DUNN REMATCHED

Jackie Rodgers and Johnny Dunn, those two keen local featherweight rivals, have been rematched for a fourth meeting. They will clash in the main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, next Monday night.

Dunn won the first two bouts between the pair at the Moose Temple and New Kensington, but Rodgers came back to win a decision in their third meeting, at Motor Square Garden. The fans protested this award and set up a cry for another scrap and it has been a long time coming, but still remains a "natural."

Johnny Dunn

One week from next Monday, Johnny Indrisano, of Boston, and Tommy Freeman, of Cleveland, two outstanding welterweights, will box the main bout at the Bowl. George Panka, Homestead heavyweight, originally was to box the main bout that night, but the Bowl was unable to dig up an opponent for him.

Between Rounds

The card has been completed for the Jack Wilson-Mickey Solomon return battle at Motor Park, Millvale, Thursday night. Joe McFowler, of Johnstown, and Jack Townsend, New Kensington, welterweights, will meet in the eight-round semi-final. J. B. The program follows: Sparky Ewalt vs. Frank Scherer, Cecil Mayberry vs. Frank Kilcoyne, Buddy Jacobs vs. Lloyd Clemens, Walter Schadewald vs. Pop O'Brien, Johnny Birch vs. Bernie Powers, Young Jones vs. John Trusky and Johnny Saville vs. Gerald Clemens.

The Rolling Battalion Ignacio Fernandez bout for the featherweight title, postponed from last night, will be staged at Hartford, Conn., tonight. Vad Vanzo meets Roger Brooks and Frankie Forte battles Prince Johnson at East Liverpool, O., Kid Chocolate meets Izzy Quadrini, Jimmy Slavin bouts Law Feldman and Eddie Quirk engages Billy McMahon at the Queensboro Stadium, New York.

Road Gripping Roadmasters

Perhaps you'll drive some of the back woods Ohio roads this summer. Those conservative thoroughfares where the state has economized by building only half a road and then sprinkling the rest with gravel. If so, you'll want utmost protection in your tires. You'll want tires that won't roll when you go off from concrete to gravel and back to concrete again. You'll want tires that will hold on the concrete at the curves, despite the gravel that has been scattered on the surface. You'll want tires that are good for traction when and where needed. In other words, no matter where you go you'll need Road Masters. See Charlie Clausner about some easy ways of getting them.

Hoover Leader in Stabilizing Stock Market.

By B. C. FORBES

PRESIDENT HOOVER one learns in financial circles, has made up his mind to become distinctly more aggressive, that instead of sitting back, he has decided the time has come for him to come more boldly to the front, that he means to use much more freely the influence and power attached to the chief magistracy.

Gossip in Wall Street goes much further. It is whispered that the President has been bestirring himself to encourage the financial-powers-that-be to bring about more cheerful conditions stock marketwise.

ONE HEARS that several of the most important figures in the financial world have lately been quietly invited to the White House to talk things over. Rumor has it that partly as a result of the President's attitude a more or less concerted co-operative movement may be set in motion to direct the course of security prices upwards. One even hears that something resembling a gigantic financial pool is in process of organization to begin operations in pivotal stocks.

IT IS SAID that the one man regarded as best fitted to handle such a pool was sounded out but he declined to shoulder the job, not because he didn't have faith that big things could be accomplished, but because he wants to be a free agent to take untrammeled advantage of the very substantial rise he is confident will develop in the near future. As with nearly everyone else who operated on a large scale last year, his holdings shrank very seriously in market value when the panic came. He retained possession, of enough millions to satisfy most people but — like most people — he wants to make more. If he acted as head of a pool financed by others, he would be handicapped in conducting his personal operations.

However, it is stated that the intention is to find someone else to take command.

WALL STREET has amazing imagination. It attributes the apparent change of front by the Interstate Commerce Commission to President Hoover's influence. The commission sanctioned the splitting of Chesapeake and Ohio shares on a four-for-one basis and followed this up by sanctioning two rate increases of more importance than any granted in a long time. Wall Street intimates oracularly that the Commerce Commission will cast off its lethargic, not to say obstructive, conduct and bestir itself to render decisions calculated to inspire fresh confidence.

PRESIDENT HOOVER is being credited, also, for the decidedly friendly spirit manifested by the Federal Reserve Board. That further co-operation can be depended upon from that source is declared emphatically. It is pointed out, likewise, that Secretary Mellon is working hand in glove with the President to drive home the cheapness and abundance of loanable money. The return of only 1¼ per cent on the latest government obligation is cited as calculated to help the whole market for gilt-edged investments. Obviously, if less than 2 per cent can be obtained on government obligations, the disposition of many heavyweight investors will be to conclude that bonds yielding very much better returns should now attract.

THE EXTRAORDINARY ease in the money market is emphasized by the drop in brokers loans to a new low figure, by a further rise in the reserve system's ratio of reserve, by the low rates for bankers' acceptances and prime commercial paper, and by the shrinkage in the percentage of brokers loans to the total market value of all stocks listed on the New York exchange. Whereas the ratio reached a peak last fall of 9.82 per cent, it has now fallen to 4.83 per cent, a new minimum. Not only so, but the announced decrease of almost 300,000 shares in the volume of United States Steel Corporation common stock held by brokers suggests that stocks have lately been passing from weak to strong ownership.

PRESIDENT HOOVER and other high government officials, aware of the threatened loss of congressional seats in the November elections, are naturally eager to bring about more friendly public sentiment towards the administration. They realize that the one best way to do this is to bring about less unemployment and a larger measure of general prosperity. Hence, Washington's activities—this, at least, is the picture now being drawn in Wall street.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Bulls Opposed — Local Market Firmer

BULL FORCES MEET STIFF OPPOSITION

Market Given Uncertain Aspect by Efforts of Bears and Profit Taking

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP.)—The newly organized bull forces encountered stiff opposition on today's stock market from the die-hard bears, who felt that speculation for the rise was becoming rash, but the bull faction managed to keep price trends fairly well in hand.

The broad advance yesterday caused considerable nervousness among traders who had followed the upswing with a lack of confidence and profit taking in addition to the efforts of bears playing for a technical reaction gave the market a rather uncertain aspect much of the time.

A few rather pleasing second quarter earnings statements helped to bolster confidence although it was known in Wall street that the best reports usually appear first. National Biscuit earned 80 cents per share against 84 cents a year ago. General Electric, 51 cents against 58 cents last year, and Commonwealth Edison, $2.67 against $2.79. Western Union earned only $2.78 in the June quarter against $3.82 in the like period last year, but this was a wide gain over the $1.45 reported for the first quarter.

FAVORABLE NEWS

The fact that several leading companies have managed to approach the record earnings of the second quarter of 1929 construed as highly favorable in view of the substantial curtailment of general business, but current estimates indicate that when all the evidence is in corporate earnings generally will show a substantial decline.

The rail stocks were helped by declaration of another $1 dividend by Missouri, Kansas, Texas. The initial dividend paid in the last quarter was regarded as purely a special disbursement and in view of the current low levels of freight traffic, Wall Street was inclined to doubt that the management would order all other at this time. The fact that the management saw fit to pay it largely from surplus indicates confidence that better times are ahead.

Call money continued plentiful and after renewing at 2½ per cent again sagged to 2 although time money was firmer with quotations up ¼ of 1 per cent. The firming of time money is regarded as in anticipation of the seasonal increase in the demand for funds which develops in the latter months of the year incident to crop moving and other developments. The weekly statement of reporting member banks showed a drop of $73,000,000 in security loans against a reduction of only $16,000,000 in brokers' loans for the same period in contrast to recent trends.

A strong feature of the early afternoon was American Telephone, which surged up more than 6 points. Sponsors of the move point out that the stock should do better after the rights expire August 1. The first half earnings statement was favorably regarded.

RAILS GAIN

In the rails Missouri Kansas and Texas surged up 4 points and New York Central, Frisco, Erie and Wabash were among those gaining 2 or more.

Such pool favorites as Vanadium and Houston Oil gained more than 3; American Tobacco B, Foster Wheeler, Eastman Kodak and Timkin Roller gained 2 or more. Among the low priced issues Kelvinator was a strong spot, rising more than 2.

Shares that were strong yesterday encountered considerable profit taking and many of the pivotal industrials barely held steady. Such issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric and Radio moved in narrow ranges.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 15. Reports of heavy dust storms in Canada led to early new upturns in wheat values today. There were also complaints of dearth of rain and of rising temperatures over domestic spring wheat territory. Opening ¼-1¼c higher, wheat afterward held near to the initial range. Influenced by fears of a return of the hot wave, corn showed independent strength. Starting at ¼-1¼c advance and later gaining more. Oats were firmer. Provisions likewise advanced.

Commission house selling of wheat future deliveries increased at 91c and over for September.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 15 (AP.)—Stocks pointed upward in a fairly busy session of the curb market today. Pool operations were apparently being tried in a few issues while sentiment in the general list seemed to have improved further, although profit-taking at intervals kept prices somewhat irregular.

Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in (000 omitted in sales column of stock list, 000 omitted in sales column of bond list.

Coal Trade Outlook Still Uncertain

By GEORGE H SNYDER

A FEW COAL COMPANIES appear to have made progress in developing improved methods of machine mining. Some of them have found ways of improving their product by the use of new processes for cleaning and improving coal. Beyond this, the industry is facing the same problems that menaced its prosperity six years ago.

An operators' victory over the United Mine Workers in Western Pennsylvania has done little to help the industry. The establishment of lower wage scales here has been followed by further cuts in the Southern fields. Operators in West Virginia and Kentucky are having their troubles with miners who object to the latest wage scales. Illinois and Indiana producers are still struggling with the union. Few mine owners are making money.

Consolidation Fails

TOO MUCH PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY is the predominant note of the coal trade today just as it has been for many years. Neither of the two most frequently mentioned solutions has proved to be of any great benefit.

Consolidations have failed to check the surplus of production. Mergers have not been able to absorb enough of the available capacity because of the inability of operators to get together on satisfactory valuations of their properties. Where properties have been tied together they did not represent enough output to have an appreciable effect on market conditions.

Bankruptcy, to result from the inability of many properties to work at a profit, is still far from doing much for the industry. Coal operators have displayed a surprising amount of tenacity in holding out against unsatisfactory operating conditions. Many companies are coming near to the end but the law of survival of the fittest works slowly in the coal trade.

Low Prices

COAL PRICES CANNOT be expected to recover from their present low levels to any marked extent until the market is relieved of the constant pressure of an output far in excess of industry's requirements. The depressed state of business has accentuated the ills of the coal producers but it must be remembered that the coal business was bad a year ago when the wheels of nearly all kinds of production were running at full speed.

From the beginning of 1930 to July 5, 235,585,000 tons of bituminous coal were produced in the United States. This was 26,613,000 tons less than in the corresponding period of the previous year but the decline has been merely a passing factor reflecting industrial conditions. Had the mining of coal shown an increase of this amount, the coal trade would still have to face the same problems.

Coal Unchanged

AFTER SIX YEARS of unsatisfactory conditions it must be admitted that the coal operators have made little progress towards regaining a condition of prosperity comparable to that of other industrial organizations. Coal is still noteworthy as an industry which has been cutting wages in a period when wages in general have been stable. It has been cutting prices at a time when, until the last few months, prices in general have been firm.

The coal producers have a long road to travel before their industry will be returned to its former position of stability in the country's business structure.

Wheat at Bottom, Price Will Rise, Stone Says

WASHINGTON, July 15—Wheat has gotten down to a point where it is about as low as it is going, said James C. Stone, member of the Federal Farm Board.

Mr. Stone believed this, he said, because farmers are holding back and storage facilities are better than they were at this time last year. Due to these facts, the price will improve, he believes.

OAKLAND SALES BETTER HERE

More than 250 Oakland and Pontiac dealers of the Pittsburgh zone at a luncheon at the Fort Pitt Hotel at noon today discussed sales policies and heard the announcement of the details of the Oaklands new "dynamite" campaign. Addresses were made by W. A. Blees, vice-president in charge of sales; D. U. Bathrick, Great Lakes regional manager; H. H. Goodrich, sales promotion manager, and J. S. Calhoun, Pittsburgh zone manager.

Blees, who is making his first Pittsburgh visit since taking over the leadership in the Oakland-Pontiac sales organization, said he was gratified to see that retail sales in the Pittsburgh zone are ahead of last year and that automobile registrations are better than the average for cars as a whole.

HUGE DROP IN OIL OUTPUT

TULSA, Okla., July 15—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended July 12 totaled 2,541,430 barrels, a decrease of 68,853 barrels daily from the previous week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

The decline was the result principally of the general curtailment program in operation in Oklahoma fields. The state's yield of 615,185 barrels a day was 39,935 barrels less than the preceding week's daily average.

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 15—The new program for additional curtailment of Oklahoma crude oil productions by 20 per cent, which has been approved by the proration committee of the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, would continue from July 15 to Sept. 1. Estimated production under the new schedule would be 570,000 barrels daily for the state. Potential output for the state is now estimated at 1,400,521 barrels daily. Prorated fields would produce 319,000 barrels of the state's production under the new plan.

DODGE DEALERS AT LUNCHEON

J. J. Kilrey, president of Frank D. Saupp, Inc., at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association today had as his guests at luncheon A. Van der Zee, general sales manager of the Dodge Bros. Corporation; Walter Graves, general sales manager of the truck division of the Dodge Bros. Corporation, and 100 Dodge dealers and salesmen from Western Pennsylvania. Following the luncheon a meeting was held for the discussion of sales plans and to study results of the Plymouth contest and the performance of the Dodge Marathon car.

It was explained that the new Dodge eight-in-line in its continuous run back and forth across the continent from coast to coast had made more than 10,000 miles and is still going at a rate of 500 miles or more a day, and standing up in every particular in the gruelling test.

Corns All Gone Big and Small Radox Took Them Roots and All

In England they have a sensible easy way to get rid of corns in just a few days. A unique instrument is given you which you use for 3 or 4 nights, then lift out the corn, roots and all, in a flash.

Ask Marlowe Drug Stores about Tenderfoot, for a package of Radox. First time on sale in America. Hard corns, soft corns, callouses, hard skin on heels and toes; it's all the same to Radox. You'll have new, strong, flawless feet a week from now. Ask for Radox and enjoy walking, dancing.

WILLYS 87 CLAIR Roadster,

DAILY TRUE STORY

Cy Weeks waddled around the cars in his wet jumper and leaky rubber boots.

Cy wasn't exactly lazy, but he certainly hated to go to work by the clock. He certainly hated to have old man Smith come and bawl him out for not cleaning the cars. He certainly hated to be in the dark, damp washroom of the garage when there were daisies on the hillsides, birds in the trees, sunshine overhead and trout in the millpond.

The [illegible] whistle sounded. Cy turned [illegible] the water and started [illegible] off his coat.

"That [illegible] to be headed half an [illegible] finish it first," old man [illegible] called at him.

Cy [illegible]. He had received [illegible] for the week's work. He had already [illegible] more [illegible] away at home.

It was [illegible] In the [illegible] Cy went over to old man [illegible].

"Tell Ma [illegible] Almighty Smith grass to wash his own car if he wants it. I'll be graduated from washin' cars today."

Old man [illegible] with Cy [illegible] nothing doing. Cy went over to Marm Watson's for breakfast. It was more like the Dutch Ways. It only [illegible] at Marm Watson's. It was wonderful.

Lulu Piper's people lived a mile below the shabby old farm house that belonged to Cy. Both of these places were 15 miles away up in the mountains.

Monday was dull at Marm Watson's.

Lulu came over and grinned. She named the hands all in one breath and said: "Take the ham an' eggs. Griddle hash is terrible!"

Cy observed: "Lulu always tipped him like that."

"Going fishin' at sundown," Cy informed her.

"Can you get off?"

"I chucked the job."

"Cy! Is that true? and we were sayin' mighty—"

Lulu hesitated and flushed. "Couldn't work for the old Simon Legree no longer. I—I was gettin' rheumatiz washin' cars all day."

"You and you're rheumatiz and you can wade Little River all day fishin'."

Cy Alarmed

"I'll leave a mess of trout at your Ma's for you tonight, Lu. Maybe we'll come back for a picture."

"You needn't bother, Cy Weeks. I'm disgusted. I want me a man who works steady."

"Shucks, Lu. See you tonight. I'll get me a better job tomorrer."

Someone else came in then and Marm Watson shrilled, "Lo-lo, tend to things." Lulu turned rather pink. It riled her considerably.

Cy hopped into his rattly old car and drove up to his lonesome home. It was a sightly location. The house could be fixed up so that it would be a marvelous place with its red-stone sides, wide porch and great yards and trees. It needed a new roof and veranda and things that would cost more than Cy ever expected to earn just then.

When Cy got home he started to get his fishing tackle together.

It was scattered all over the work bench in the shed. There was plenty of time. The trout wouldn't begin to bite until the sun got lower.

Up in the attic was an old box he remembered. It had belonged to his granddad. This would be just the thing to put his fishing tackle in and keep it from kicking around and getting lost in the shavings in the shed by the workbench.

He found it and brought it down. An old chest about three feet long, made of pine mellowed with age.

There was a lot of junk in it. Cy dumped this all out on top of the tool chest and began sorting his tackle. Cy prided himself on his tackle, flies and lures. If only people could get paid for being really skillful fishermen, Cy certainly would have drawn down big money.

As he fussed around cleaning sawdust and resin from his best silk line, a shadow fell across the door to the shed.

Cy looked up.

"Could I have some water for my car?"

A well dressed man, wearing spectacles, stood there.

"Sure. I'll get you some."

Cy dropped the silk line, picked up the bucket and started for the well.

The stranger chanced to glance down at the "junk" Cy had dumped out of the old-fashioned chest. He darted over and examined some of the letters; he stuck his head out of the door and shouted:

"Imogene, here, hurry!"

Quits Job

A trim little lady got out of the car and went to the shed.

"Look!" said the man.

Imogene looked. She looked again and adjusted her pince-nez and looked a third time.

"It can't really be, Bosewain!" she cried.

One might have thought she had discovered a few pecks of diamonds and rubies. "It is a plant, spread out here to catch people, Chesney!"

"Be logical, my dear. This uncouth youth wasn't expecting us. He has no signs out; he wouldn't know enough——"

"All right, mister," said Cy as he came back, and then, "Lookin' at them flies? I tie 'em myself."

"Tie flies—why?" asked the lady addressed as Imogene. "Is such cruelty necessary?"

"Fishing flies, my dear. Remember your cousin Arthur. He used to be silly about such [illegible] positively. He turned to Cy. He picked up a yellowed envelope that had blue and red and green pictures on it. A Civil War soldier at a rose-covered cottage being welcomed home.

"Where did you get this?" he asked.

Cy looked at it.

"Granddad's," Grandpop was in the Civil War and he wrote a lot of letters to her."

The man addressed as Chesney turned and nodded to the lady addressed as Imogene.

"Young man," he said, "I am C. W. Ogilve and this is Mrs. Ogilve. We are interested in [illegible] stamp collections, my dear. He will understand that."

Cy [illegible] lots of kids used to collect stamps, lot of noises, takes time when a feller might be fishing, Cy said.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogilve smiled at each other. Then Mrs. Ogilve squealed and made a dash for the old pine chest. She lifted it, shrilled it, rubbed it, tabbed her thumb nail in it and almost kissed it.

"Pumpkin pine, very early American," she said.

"That was in the attic, used to be grandpop's," he said, his dad give it to him, makes me a swell box to keep my fishing tackle in."

"Young man," Mrs. Ogilve said, "that chest is valuable. I've gone all my life being honest. I might promise to buy you a great big fishing tackle box for it, but the chest is worth at least seventy-five dollars."

"For gor sake, it's yours," Cy said.

Helps Stranger

They then went through those letters.

Some of these are priceless, Mr. Ogilve got out a limp leather book from his pocket and looked up things.

"Did you have people from Boscwain?" he asked.

Grandmarm's folks come from Boscwain.

Mr. Ogilve almost yelped.

"It's a genuine Boscwain," he gasped.

"Worth fourteen hundred," said Mrs. Ogilve nodding. Cy edged away from them. "These crazy fools might grab an axe and chase him; they couldn't be sane, he thought.

"You will sell these, young man?"

"Sure, for cash."

They talked some more. They went up into the old attic. They found a great many more things, some dating back to the Mexican War. They found two old cradles and some spinning wheels. Finally Cy got in his car and followed them down to the town. There Mr. Ogilve evidently had some trouble making himself known at the bank. When he left it was on promise to be back the next day for various things Cy was quite willing to sell.

The Ogilves left with between thirty and forty old stamps and stamped envelopes, and they left exactly thirty-two hundred in the bank to Cy's credit.

Cy looked at the clock.

Three-thirty.

He hurried out. He had important things to do.

Old man Smith stopped him and bawled him out for quitting, telling him he'd be a town pauper in another year.

Cy told him to go and sit on a tack. That was very smart repartee in his town at that time.

Cy went over and got Lulu. She was still sore at him. He showed her his bank book.

Lulu promptly got over being sore at him.

They were out in Marm Watson's back [illegible] then Marm came to the back porch.

"Loo-loo, you come and shell them peas and peel them taters and stop waastin' your time with worthless lazy boys you hear?"

"You go sit on a tack!" shrilled Lulu.

Stranger Inquires

She knew her slang as well as Cy.

"Now, what?" Lulu asked. "She'll fire me."

"She can't. You've quit your job. We've got to git over to the town hall and get a license and go to Parson Bedloe's and get hitched and get up to my house before sundown so we can catch us a mess of milipond trout so you can cook 'em for our dinner."

"Get married now? In these clothes?"

"Gosh, Lulu, you got to wear some clothes—"

Lulu blushed prettily, boxed his ears and went along to the town hall for the license and then to Parson Bedloe's for the brief ceremony.

"Hop in, we got to step on it," Cy said. "I'll get us a new car tomorrer and have a new roof put on and the place fixed up. Blop off at your Ma's and tell her and don't waste time. I got to get down to th' pond."

Ma Piper said that Lulu could not stay at Cy's place all night until she saw—

Lulu showed her the marriage certificate.

That made it different.

At dark Lulu had the skillet ready and Cy got home with the trout.

They had them for dinner.

"Enough trouts for breakfast. Imagine gettin' thirty in that short time. That's what I call luck," Cy said.

"Yes," Lulu agreed. "This has been sort of a lucky day all around."

"It would be far better," says Dr. Walter Damrosch of the Music Industries Convention, "for our young people to sit down and practice a musical instrument than to be racing up and down a boulevard at sixty miles per hour."

All in all, a rather nice distinction which would depend a great deal on whether or not you manufactured musical instruments.

And also, perhaps, on whether you think young people should be maimed by tourists or neighbors.

But the most agreeable solution of the problem would be to let young people practice their musical instruments in the middle of a boulevard where other people are racing at sixty miles an hour.

John Summers and Charlie Nunn were celebrating a little Sunday, when they got into Charlie's taxi and went to the house of Judge Hagins.

John went along merely as a friend. He is said to have suggested that Charlie lick the Judge and he would fight the Judge's son-in-law, Guy Ross. John explained later he didn't have a thing against Guy. But he evidently figured if Charlie wanted to lick the Judge, he would whip at least one member of the family.

The next day came the warrants.

War on Blue Law Goes Ahead Satisfactorily

Opponents of the Blue Law of 1794, which makes it a crime to indulge in harmless amusements on Sunday, have every reason to be satisfied with the progress of the fight against it.

Citizens of Allegheny County have declared for its repeal or modification by a vote of more than five to one in the Sun-Telegraph's poll. Philadelphia urges a change. Borough after borough is opening swimming pools on Sunday or doing other things that show how the people feel.

These things may lead to the belief that modification of the Blue Law is assured—that "it's all over but the shouting." Such an attitude is to be avoided. Overconfidence must be guarded against.

The only safe policy is to assume there will be a hard fight in the Legislature and to omit nothing that will tend to break down opposition. The supporters of the Blue Law are not saying much for publication, but it can be depended upon they are not idle, and it is to be remembered that they have been in fights of this kind before and have always won.

Representative M. A. Musmanno is doing the prudent thing in undertaking to organize a state-wide association, with a committee in every county, to further the campaign for modification of the Blue Law. With the approval of the anti-Blue Law forces of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia he proposes to amend the statute by making it a matter of local option whether or not there shall be a ban on Sunday activities, just as in pre-Volstead days there was local option on prohibition.

This is the democratic way of settling the matter. If there are communities in which feeling is overwhelmingly against Sunday movies and the like, let them bar these things without interference from the rest of the Commonwealth. On the other hand, let contrary-minded communities have their way, too; if they see nothing wrong in enjoying on Sunday amusements that are legitimate on other days, they should be given the right to have them.

Co-Operation Desirable In River Improvements

A. H. Burchfield, president of the Joseph Horne Company, has said a needed and timely word in calling for co-operation among the various civic and commercial bodies interested in river improvements.

The city is soon to be confronted with detailed plans for erection of flood walls, establishment of a water front boulevard Golden Triangle, relocation of various streets and construction of river-rail terminals, all embodied in ehensive program, in the preparation of which the Department of Public Works has been engaged for about four years.

As Mr. Burchfield points out, the scheme has features in which a multitude of organizations are interested. The Better Traffic Committee is concerned with street changes, the Flood Commission with river walls, the Chamber of Commerce with river-rail terminals, and so on. That these various things may be integrated in one comprehensive undertaking, the efforts of the civic bodies should be co-ordinated through some central organization.

It will be a hard task to "put over" this great plan calling for expenditure of many millions of dollars. All interested organizations will have to pull together. And it is none too early to arrange for teamwork.

Park's Belated Attack On Racetrack Gambling

Since there is no doubt that the principal purpose of the dog race tracks that have sprung up recently in various parts of the Pittsburgh district was to foster gambling, and that, with betting eliminated, there would be no races, District Attorney Andrew T. Park has done well in giving the tracks his attention. But it is to be regretted that he did not suppress the gambling as soon as he learned of it. He has now directed that betting be stopped, with the result that the operators of the tracks have served notice they will discontinue the races. Better late than never.

Thus there has been nipped in the bud what gave promise of flowering into a serious evil. The Blawnox Council was perfectly right in telling Park it felt that a public gambling institution such as the dog race track near there was harmful to the community.

What with slot machines, clearing house lotteries, baseball pools and the like, Allegheny County is already oversupplied with opportunities for those who like to hazard their money on long chances. It is to be hoped the district attorney's move against race track gambling will be followed by more vigorous action against these other evils.

Petty Court System of State Needs Revision

The people of Greentree are aroused, and justly so, over the recent invasion of the borough by a Wilkinsburg constable who haled a number of the citizens before a Carnegie justice of the peace for not having dog licenses. It is another case that strongly suggests the need for revision of the system under which our petty courts are operated.

The justice of the peace was magnanimous enough to excuse the Greentree offenders from payment of fines, which would have gone to the state, but imposed costs of $5.75 each. The costs imposed in a squire's court go to the squire and constable.

While violation of the dog license law is, of course, not to be excused, the circumstances of the Greentree raid create sympathy for the demand of the burgess that constables and squires stay in their own bailiwick.

At any rate there ought to be a change in the law to keep squires from personally profiting from convictions. The United States Supreme Court has held a magistrate has no right to try a case in which he will receive an emolument if he finds a verdict of guilty. The statutes of Pennsylvania should be amended to conform to that decision.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Join the Navy

It is difficult for the average citizen of these glorious etats unis to figure this naval parity business, or why.

"Bugs" Baer

We know that a rowboat with an outboard motor is equivalent to three mechanics with a monkey wrench. We know that a submarine will twist a cruiser for an outside loop. We know that an airplane can knock the whiskers off a battleboat.

But the only sensible conversation we ever heard about a navy was the noise made by a riveting machine in a navy yard.

Those riveting machines are not good talkers. They stutter something terrible. But we understand that everything is all right in Rumania because King Carol has just announced that next Monday will be Old Queen Week.

We cannot understand why Japan insists that it needs more strength in order to promote universal peace and satisfaction. If a country is sincere about peace why doesn't it build a swan boat with a long neck?

As the distinguished statesman said, all is lost save honor. And that has just been taken off the stock exchange and put on the curb.

Legislative bodies all over the world are pulling and tugging with disarmament statistics. Everything is worked out to the last detail except where to deliver the bodies.

This matter cannot rest in midair. That's why an ostrich always sits down to lay an egg.

America is building more boats. So is England just as fast as it can borrow the gravy. Does that look like the neighbors' children were going to roll a hoop or take lessons on the bow and arrow?

France and Italy haven't stopped loading up for a second. Russia and Germany are all set to kick each other around a 40-acre lot while America is looking up the chimney for Santa Claus.

Does that look like a peace treaty is going to have any more authority than a busted umbrella going over Niagara Falls? We know the answer to that one. The goat coughed up the red-flannel undershirt and flagged the train.

America needs battlescows to protect its merchant marine. But what does the average man care about the merchant marine when Lon Chaney has just made a talking picture. He has a beautiful voice and is liable to wind up with all the Kansas hogs in his backyard.

A VOYAGE TO THE MOON

By Archibald Henderson

It is generally credited by scientists, nowadays, that a trip to the moon is a project by no means impossible of realization. A rocket plane or rocket projectile is now believed to be the most promising vehicle for making the journey through the inter-stellar spaces. Fritz von Opel has made a short but successful flight in a rocket-driven airplane.

Prof. Herman Oberth is working on a rocket model which, he predicts, will succeed in carrying mail from Berlin to New York in an incredibly short space of time. It is understood that he now has the model for a moon rocket in the course of construction.

Prof. Robert H. Goddard, of Clark University, in this country, has made many experiments with rockets, with the aid of funds supplied by the Smithsonian Institution. Already he has devised a model of a moon rocket; and quite recently he has advanced the suggestion that special sun motors might be used on space rockets, which would take the power required for locomotion from the sunlight which permeates all space within the solar system.

The first voyage, when it is made (we shall not say if it is made), will probably be from the earth to the moon. The diameter of the earth is roughly 8,000 miles; and the distance from the moon to the earth is only about 240,000 miles. In round numbers then the distance from the earth to the moon is only about 30 times the diameter of the earth. As inter-stellar spaces go, this is a comparatively short distance.

A clear analysis of the problem has recently been put forward by Dr. John Q. Stewart, associate professor of astronomical physics at Princeton University. Einstein has indicated that there are enormous sources of energy, as yet locked up, in the atom. Experiments in the laboratory now show that ionized hydrogen contains 100 times the energy of coal and oxygen. Triply ionized lithium contains 1,600 times the energy of coal and oxygen. It is reasonable to believe that these, or other far greater sources of energy, will ultimately be made available for engineering purposes.

Dr. Stewart proposes a spherical projectile or vehicle, say 110 feet in diameter. Projecting from it in all directions would be a dozen or more cannon. The ship would initially weigh 70,000 tons, from which 28,000 tons would be shot from the guns to give propulsion. When one of the cannon is fired the ship would be propelled in the opposite direction. Material would be fired from the gun with a velocity of 200 miles a second. Two hours and 29 minutes after the takeoff, when the firing would cease, the ship would have acquired a speed of 190 miles a minute. If all went well, the ship would cross the moon's orbit in 70 hours.

During the past century vehicular speed has increased at the rate of 2 per cent a year. At this rate of advance a speed of 1,000 miles per hour should be reached in 1950. Speeds up to 50,000 miles an hour should be attained by the year 2030.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Although I'm a parent myself, I hold no special brief for ma's and pa's. I'll freely admit, as a class, we know less about our jobs than any other class of workers. And the damage we do by our ignorance and conceit is plenty. But still I rise to protest against this modern fad of hanging everything on the old folks.

It is true that papa and mama can put an awful cramp in little Willie's style—but that's no reason why every conceivable form of human cussedness and cowardice should be blamed on some snub or swat received while in the cradle. Which is, at present, our most popular form of alibi.

Why is Willard a flop and Henrietta a nag and Gladys a whiner and Carter a bore and Fred a sore head and Horace a grouch? If you'll listen to them (and I'd like to see you get out of it!) it's all because mother favored Sister Sue or dad made 'em chop wood while the other kids played baseball. So naturally they got an Inferiority Complex. And they've never since been able to face life's cruel buffets.

Now, of course, there's nothing unusual in this desire to pass the buck for our human frailty. Adam started the practice when he blamed that apple on Eve, and it has been going strong ever since. And our elders had doubtless the same desire to hang their lapses on their progenitors, which is now exhibited by the younger generation. But they ddn't get very far with it, for their wheeze lacked, as it were, professional backing. The psychiatrist had not as yet arrived to put his scientific Okey on their moans and mutterings. So, regardless of what the Old Folks had done to them, they were supposed to snap out of it and act regular. Which they generally did.

But those simple days have gone forever. Now the woods are simply crammed with learned gents who, for a slight consideration, are willing to listen to any amount of belliakin and give you their psychiatric assurance that it's all because Ma made you wear blue ribbons when you preferred pink.

Mind you, I'm not saying that they're not partly right. Nor do I believe real psychiatrists and their stuff. Personally, I think that the conscientious members of the clan are the best thing that has happened to the human race. But what I'm beefing about is the use which a lot of lugubrious loafers made of these psychiatric delvings. For, having discovered what ails 'em, do they then try to make a fresh start? No, indeedy. They proceed to treat themselves like rare Museum Specimens. And life becomes one long discourse on Exhibit A and how he, or she, got that way.

Is any of it news to you? I'll say it isn't. You, too, have had pesty parties in your family. You, too, have been picked on and put upon. But you managed to struggle along in spite of your upper cuts. Why can't they?

They can—but they won't. They won't because they don't want to. They're too lazy and conceited. There's much hard work and little glory in acting regular. But you can attract plenty of attention and duck large gobs of labor and responsibility if you're different. So they specialize on Being Different—until this Inferiority Complex stunt has become a regular racket. And it's doubtful which is the worst pest—the guy with the gat or the bozo with the bleat.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

At the Play

A drudge sits, tranced, within the gloom
Which well might typify her days,
Drab hours wherein no pleasures bloom
And only toil fills all her ways.
Before her, in the footlights' gleam
Walks loveliness in human guise,
A woman fairer than a dream,
Sauve as her silks, tender and wise.
The actress gives her skill and art,
Pours out the riches of her soul
Into a master's written part,
Until truth flowers through her role.
Entranced, in shadow sits the drudge,
Sharing this weaving of a life,
Forgetting soon her feet must trudge
Down ways of weariness and strife.
At last the final curtain falls;
The drudge starts, rises, well content.
Hers, too, were youth, love, marble halls,
A half-week's wages wisely spent!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

BOOK IV. CHAPTER V.
Growth of the Individual
SECTION I. NORMAL AND MONSTROUS DEVELOPMENT

We have described the machinery of heredity—the chromosomes and the chains of unitgenes along them. We turn now to an account of individual growth and development which is their concrete realization. We propose to watch the mechanism at work and to glean what we can of how it works.

The science of Development Physiology is still largely in the stage of preliminary inquiry. Its known facts are scattered and somewhat fragmentary. Particularly is this true of invertebrate animals. But there are signs of a coming synthesis.

H. G. Wells

Much of the work on vertebrata has been done on the very accessible eggs of frogs and newts, and in what follows, where they do not state the contrary, the reader can assume that we have these Amphibia in view.

The fertilized egg divides and subdivides again. The mass of cells thus accumulated forms and organizes itself; the rudiments of various structures appear; gradually the parts are differentiated, finished and perfected.

Finally, from a single protoplasmic globule there has arisen an elaborate, functioning living creature. What are the laws that control this orderly self-modeling?

The first stage of development is the establishment of a direction for the future embryo. When an artist is about to draw a complicated picture he roughs it in, very faintly, in pencil, to decide where the main masses and lines will be.

So with the egg. The first thing it has to do is to make up its mind, so to speak, which parts of it will be right and left, front and back. All higher animals and plants have a definite main axis about which their bodies are symmetrical. In man and the vertebrates generally, it is the line of the backbone.

And human symmetry, like that of most many-celled animals, is bilateral; the body consists of two more or less equivalent sides. In a polyp of a sea urchin, where symmetry is radial, the main axis runs from the mouth down the stem. In a tree it runs up the trunk.

The first step in the organization of the egg must be then the achievement of this main axis. In some eggs this is decided only after they are laid.

In the bladder seaweed Fucus, for instance, it is the direction of the light falling on the fertilized egg which normally determines what position the two ends of the future plant shall have, and in the laboratory weak electric currents can be made to do the same for it.

Usually, however, it is not the outer world but the mother that determines her offspring's front and hind end, by impressing an axis on the unfertilized egg during its growth. In the simplest cases the end of the egg-cell which comes to the surface of the ovary becomes the future front end.

When there is much yolk in the egg, more is generally deposited near the future hind end, and the amount gradually diminishes toward the front. Yolk is food laid aside for the growing embryo, an inert, cumbersome substance, and it delays the inter-play of physical and chemical processes that constitute the life of the cell.

In the front end, where head and sense-organs and controls are to be developed, where the finest work has to go on, it would be most in the way. It is thrust to the less important hinder regions. So that there is a gradient, so to speak, of activity from front to back, along the main axis; and even when no grade arrangement of yolk is visible, the gradient in activity seems to be there.

The fact that there are fore and hind ends is indeed only an expression of such a gradient.

Next comes two-sidedness. In most higher animals this is determined at and by fertilization. When the sperm first pricks the egg there is great excitement within it; the protoplasm swirls and eddies slowly around, and it is this streaming which draws the sperm head in and sweeps the two nuclei together.

It is during this excitement that the bilateral symmetry is determined. In the frog's egg, for instance, on the side opposite that on which the sperm happens to bore its way in a pale patch appears (owing to the sucking in of pigment from the surface).

This "grey crescent" marks the middle of the future back. Before this moment the egg had fore and hind ends, but was without back or belly, right or left. Where these shall appear is imposed upon it from without by the mere accident of where the sperm makes its attack. In insects, however, the egg is already bilateral when laid. Here conditions within the mother's body decide all the embryo's future direction lines.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS.—The Cafe du Dome, on the convenient corner where Boulevard Raspail crosses Montparnasse, remains the stage for that curious assortment of oddly dressed freaks spawned out of the Latin Quarter attics. The unwashed, the shoeless and hatless, the dreamers and cadgers are all there.

The enterprising John Ringling never provided a free sideshow comparable to this one. The mannishly-dressed woman, the effeminate fop, the lavender-shirted Argentine gigolo, the cocotte and the brothel runner, mill about in a human crazy-quilt of eccentricity and perversion.

Just as Greenwich Village has passed as an artistic sanctuary, so is the Latin Quarter being engulfed by hokum. The struggling artist with real ambitions has almost vanished and left the field to the petty racketeers who grow whiskers and long hair, sprout flowing ties and trim the tourists.

The latest group of gyppers on Montparnasse are the "oilers." They walk up and down, always hatless, with their portfolios and select a table next to their victims. Then they begin to inspect their etchings at arm's length. A confederate strolls up and admires them tremendously. They exchange a few technical art terms.

The work is passed to the victims for inspection. The aura of poverty incites a sale for usually 60 francs. The victims will never know that the etchings are printed from a steel engraving plate and are purchasable along the quay for five francs. The artist never made an etching in his unromantic life.

Ladies suffering from the D. Y. complex, the Latin Quarter euphemism for Departed Youth, are invariably gullible in such transactions. For the first time in my life and while sitting along the Dome sidewalk today, I was singled out as a hophead. One of those itinerant Turk sellers of oriental rugs sidled up to the table.

While holding out one of his rugs, he eyed me covertly, looked about furtively, and whispered inquiringly: "A little shot, M'sieu?" I should have busted him in the off hawk eye, but like a simpleton I mumbled an embarrassed "Not today." I didn't begin to get really mad until I was half way home—the black baboon!

Among the ever present pavement hawkers in front of the Dome was a fellow with a wire cigaret holder looped around his ear. The end that held the cigaret had a hinge-like arrangement that permitted him to flip the cigaret in and out of his mouth as he walked along. It won my instant vote as the most useless invention ever devised. And if the demonstrator survives nicotine poisoning he's a physiological wonder.

At 4:30 in the afternoon a black-shirted, leatherlunged and largeboned centaur comes pedaling madly up to the Dome curb on his bicycle with a knapsack filled with the daily doings of the studios—a four page sheet called "le Montparnasse." It sells for 10 centimes and its scandalous and salacious contents would give Mr. John Sumner a terrific wrench. Everybody buys to see what they did last night.

At a front row table, too, was a porcine gentleman with the unmistakable red cheeks and blond hair of the Fatherland, placidly sipping a stone mug of beer from a mottoed mat. Between sips he read his copy of the Pariser Zeitung—a Paris newspaper printed in German. Time flies!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why look upon coming old age as a tragedy?

Glances in the mirror with certain lights have shown you that tell-tale lines are fast appearing.

You have become much exercised and worried over them.

When you look upon an exuberant young person you are envious.

You feel that nature is unkind and wonder why.

Isn't it your slant on life that makes you resent approaching age?

Why not be sensible?

Why not adapt yourself to your present age and what the world provides for a person of your age?

If you are in fair health you will find pleasures according to your years.

You should not expect the amusements of youth to be as interesting and exhilerating when you are physically unfit to enjoy them.

Be normal and study to do the things that normally go with your years.

If you have been right you haven't anything to fear, or worry about.
